House Adopts District Sum Of $4,200,000; Bill in Doubt

Chamber Follows Lead of Blanton in Move for Compromise.

Barrier to Outside Work Is Defeated

A Continuing Resolution Unlikely as Conferees Near Agreement.

By James D. Secrest.

The status of the 1937 District supply bill became further confused last night as the House, under domination of Representative Thomas L. Blanton, voted for a $4,200,000 Federal contribution and further instructed its conferees on the other 86 amendments added by the Senate.

During a session that at times approached bedlam, with members hurling epithets at each other, the House followed Blanton's lead in all save one of his requests. On that motion, however, which would have barred District employes from doing outside work for pay, the members voted him down 208 to 86 on a roll call.

The House managers were authorized to concur in 50 of the Senate amendments, the last involuntarily, to insist further upon 33 Senate amendments, and to accept compromises on four.

Besides the lump sum, which was split half way between the $2,700,000 voted by the House and the $3,700,000 recommended by the Budget Bureau and adopted by the Senate, the House conferees proposed a compromise on the three Senate amendments which would have added 50 privates to the Metropolitan Police Department. The House offers to accept 20.

The next move in the Senate-House tug-of-war, it is expected, will be a request for a further conference from the House. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate conferees, said he will await word from the House before either filing the formal disagreement signed last week or introducing a continuing resolution.

Indications at this stage are that an agreement will be reached on the District appropriation bill, thus obviating the necessity for a continuing resolution. However, it is believed that the House conferees will be forced to return to the House for further instructions or a change in its vote on the lump sum payment. Senator Thomas declined to comment on the House compromise last night, but he has several times stated that he would not go below $5,000,000. His colleagues, including Senator Glass, chairman of the Senate Appropriation Committee, insist that the Senate should accept nothing less than $5,700,000.

Blanton's move yesterday came somewhat as a surprise because of his adamant attitude in past conferences and the signing of a formal disagreement last week by Senate and House conferees. It followed a meeting of the House managers.

Preferred Compromise.

Although the Texan insisted that his compromise proposals were made in the interest of the District, it is believed that he preferred giving in somewhat to accepting a continuing resoluton which would keep the lump-sum payment at $5,700,000 and retain character education and, he thought at the time, the restriction on local doctors, lawyers and judges on the District pay roll.

The House adopted his reduced lump-sum proposal and the elimination of character education funds, but reversed him on the outside-employment limitation. The motion was made by Representative Boilcan (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

Blanton even offered to raise the classification of Dstrict employes affected from $2400 to $3,500 and up. Chairman Norton of the House Dstrict Committee led the successful fight against the amendment and was assisted by members on both sides of the aisle, including Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee.

Mrs. Norton pointed out that even members of Congress received fees for practicing law or making lectures and asked Blanton if it weren't true that a law firm in Texas carries the name of Blanton, Blanton & Blanton.

Obviously nonplussed by the question the Texan opened his defense with the remark, "Members of Congress are different," and con-

50 Feared Killed In Esthonia Blast

Tallinn, Esthonia, June 15 (U.P.).—Fifty persons were feared killed and 30 seriously injured in an explosion of an army laboratory today.

The laboratory was situated in a woods 8 kilometers from Tallinn. Cause of the explosion was unknown.

Reserve army officers were attending a special course in the laboratory and of 160 known, to be present only 90 have been accounted for tonight.

The danger of further explosions made rescue work impossible before late tonight and it was believed an exact list of casualties would not be possible before Tuesday night.

Gov. Olson Leads for Senate In Minnesota's Primary Vote

Townsend Man Trails Barrows in Race for Maine Governor.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, June 15.—Gov. Floyd B. Olson and his appointee, United States Senator Elmer Benson, out ran their opponents for the Farmer-Labor Party's senatorial and governorship nominations, respectively, tonight in Minnesota's primary election.

Gov. Olson, with a little-known political foe contesting with him for the Farmer-Labor senatorial nomination, was running far ahead of Carl E. Taylor. The vote in 51 precincts out of 3,724 in the State gave Olson 3,622, Taylor 128.

Returns from 100 precincts gave for Farmer Labor Governor: Benson, 4,925; Magnus Johnson, former Senator, 2,034; Edgar B. Bernard, 334, and Adolph W. Olson, 266.

For Republican Senator: Representative Theodore Christianson, 2,303; Mrs. Thomas D. Schall, 699, in 51 precincts.

These figures embraced returns from 20 precincts in St. Paul, where the labor vote was running to Benson, who bore the party's endorsement.

The Democratic factional fight, in which party supremacy in Minnesota was at stake, was a see-saw affair. The Joseph Wolf group had its Senate candidate, Patrick J. Delaney, out in front over Beldin H. Loftsgaarden, backed by the Joseph Moonan bloc. The vote in 51 precincts was Delaney 650, Loftsgaarden 235.

In that party's gubernatorial scramble E. E. Novak, a Moonan candidate, was behind Fred A. Curtis, 385 to 253, in 27 precincts.

In the First Congressional District, where Townsend and National Union for Social Justice supporters waged a stiff fight for James C. Oliver, who sought the Republican United States Representative nomination, Oliver led a field of nine with 38 of the 147 precincts reported. Oliver had 1,389 votes, as compared with 1,070 for his nearest opponent, Raymond S. Oakes, of Portland, member of the Governor's council.

'Break' in Fight Over Tax Bill Held Imminent

Talk of Compromise Leads to Hope of Adjournment This Week.

By Robert C. Albright.

Despite an outwardly unyielding position on both sides of the deadlocked tax conference, talk of "compromise" filtered through Capitol corridors yesterday and revived leadership forecasts of a possible adjournment by the end of the week.

A "break" in the tax stalemate failed to develop at morning and afternoon conferences, but Senate Democratic conferees met late in the day with L. H. Parker, committee expert, giving rise to reports that developments might be expected today.

One basis for compromise was put forward and tentatively rejected. It called for a 25 per cent flat tax on corporate earnings. This tax would be lowered by 1 per cent for every 10 per cent of earnings distributed, until an irreducible minimum tax of 15 per cent was reached.

New Legislation Offered.

Adjournment prospects were not improved by last-minute pressure of new legislation, which sponsors optimistically insisted could pass this session.

The Senate called up the $876,000,000 Wagner housing bill. Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, who has received some assurances that the House also will consider it, predicted the Senate will approve his low-income housing program today.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee favorably reported the Guffey coal bill, designed to replace the law invalidated by the courts. The House, which already has a rule on the measure, may call it up today or tomorrow.

Another bid for action on ship subsidy legislation, which has passed the House but has repeatedly been altered and sidetracked in the Senate, will be made after the housing bill is disposed of.

Calendars Glutted.

Conference reports on such major legislation as the chain store and lobby registration bills, as well as routine appropriation measures, glutted both House and Senate.

Thus, with the relief bill still in

Labor Statute Is Held Invalid In U. S. Court

Last Major Enterprise of New Deal Relating to Workers Is Voided.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, June 15.—The Wagner-Connery labor relations act, President Roosevelt's new deal for the workingman, today was declared unconstitutional by the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Bluntly, in a 2½-page opinion, the court ruled:

"The Constitution does not vest in the Federal Government the power to regulate the relation as such of employer and employe in production or manufacture."

It was the last major enterprise of the New Deal left on the statute books that applied to labor, and the decision came in the face of labor unrest, particularly in tenant farms of the South and coal fields.

Case Brought by Board.

The case was brought to court by the National Labor Relations Board seeking an order to compel Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, of Aliquippa, Pa., to reinstate several employes it had discharged, allegedly for union activities.

National Labor Relations Board officials in Washington indicated the New Orleans decision would be appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

Special significance was attached to today's decision because it was the first rendered in an action instituted by the board in an effort to enforce its rulings. Other circuit court rulings had been on injunction actions brought by employer interests contesting the board's authority.

The opinion was concurred in by all three of the appellate judges—Rufus E. Foster, Samuel H. Sibley and Joseph C. Hutcheson. It was the same court that upheld the constitutionality of Tennessee Valley Authority a year ago.

"Quite a Wallop."

One Labor Board official told the United Press: "The decision is quite a wallop. It is the first ruling on an order sought by the Labor Relations Board and the court here is considered liberal."

Basis of the opinion was that production and transportation are two separate enterprises; that it is up

Skull Fractured, D. C. Boatman Found Dead in Bay; Friend Held

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Prince Frederick, Md., June 15.—A Calvert County coroner's jury tonight ordered Aubrey R. Stinson, 27, of 2111 First street northwest, Washington, held pending outcome of it sinvestigation into the death of Beverly Fenderson, 23, of the same address, whose body was found this morning floating in Chesapeake Bay, a few hundred yards off shore at Wilburn's Beach. An autopsy showed Fenderson's neck and skull were fractured.

Stinson told the jury he and Fenderson, had gone out fishing about 5:30 p. m. Saturday and the latter had been drowned after he jumped overboard and swam in search of a lost oar.

Stinson said that when he became worried about his companion, he called out to him. Fenderson, he said, replied:

"The water's not deep. I can stand in it."

Just after that, Stinson said, Fenderson disappeared.

After a fruitless search, Stinson rowed back to shore, using the one oar. Fishermen dragged Chesapeake Bay for the body Saturday night and all day Sunday. It was not until this morning that it was found by Commander Vinton Bull with the aid of a State police boat.

The body was removed to the Calvert County Hospital here and a coroner's jury was summoned by Justice of the Peace Arthur R. King, of Sutherland.

It was after Dr. Hugh Ward, of Owings, told the jury that his autopsy showed Fenderson had not died of drowning, but from a broken neck and a fractured skull, that Stinson was ordered held. Dr. Ward said there was no water in the man's lungs; they were filled with blood. The jury is expected to reach a decision tomorrow night.

In Washington it was learned from James Beach, who lives in the same house with the two men, that Fenderson and Stinson were good friends.

Landon Plans Eastern Talk To Open Race

N. Y. Rally in Fall Will Be Campaign Climax for Republicans.

Nominee Sees Murray, Who Praises Platform, Predicts Victory.

By the United Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 15.—Gov. Alf M. Landon has decided to open his major campaign for the presidency with an address in western Pennsylvania near his birthplace at West Middlesex, Pa., the United Press learned tonight.

Landon mapped Republican campaign strategy tonight with his national chairman, John D. M. Hamilton and other advisors. The latter has urged Landon to begin his series of Eastern speeches in New York City, but the Kansas Governor decided to save the New York address for the climax of his tour.

Previously, Landon had decided to open with a New York speech and follow it up with speeches in Philadelphia, Boston and other populous centers.

From western Pennsylvania, Landon was expected to tour smaller cities of the East and then start a Western itinerary. Landon expects to speak in San Francisco, Portland, Los Angeles and in smaller communities along this route.

Back East in October.

Then in October he would swing East again, making his hardest drive in an effort to carry President Roosevelt's own State. The campaign's climax would be a meeting in Madison Square Garden, according to present plans.

Hamilton said the following appointments have been made:

C. B. Goodspeed, of Chicago, assistant national chairman and vice-chairman of the finance committee.

Carleton McVeagh, of New York, assistant to the national chairman.

James Jappe, of Cleveland, assistant to the national chairman.

Hamilton said that Joseph W. Martin, jr., Massachusetts Representative, will be in charge of the New York office. J. K. Bradley, of Bridgeport, Conn., will be asked to head the National Young Republican Committee again.

Talks to Murray.

Topeka, Kans., June 15 (A).—Gov. Alf M. Landon and his red-haired campaign manager, John D. M. Hamilton, laid a plan of battle across the luncheon table today after a significant morning conference between the Republican Presidential nominee and the militant Oklahoman, "Alfalfa Bill" Murray.

Hamilton came home from Cleveland to a rousing ovation from his friends and neighbors just after Murray, Democratic former Governor of Oklahoma, left the capitol expressing approval of the Republican platform. Murray declined, however, to say in so many words that he would support Landon.

"I am advocating Democratic principles wherever I find them," said Murray, "I am not talking about parties or candidates."

So deeply were Landon and Hamilton engrossed in pointing for tomorrow's all-important meeting with Col. Frank Knox, Vice Presidential nominee, and party leaders that their conversation extended late into the afternoon.

Press Parley Canceled.

Cancellation of Landon's regular afternoon press conference precluded immediate comment on such points of strategy as the campaign participation of Senator Borah, the independent Republican from Idaho, and Herbert Hoover, which undoubtedly were canvassed in the discussion.

Hoover, speeding toward a fishing trip in the Far West, let it be known at Ogden, Utah, that whether he takes to the stump depends on whether he is asked by Landon and the Republican National Committee.

Landon and Hamilton also had an opportunity to go over first-hand the dramatic last hours at Cleveland in which Senator Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, said he would not run for the Vice Presidency.

Hamilton, new chairman of the Republican National Committee, was welcomed on the east steps of the capitol by Gov. Landon, who stood hatless in a blazing sun.

"We're going into this campaign to win and I know you will win," Hamilton asserted.

"You bet we're going to win," the Governor replied. "With you as our leader we're bound to win."

Hamilton went to the Governor's residence for the luncheon.

One tentative plan was known to contemplate Hamilton taking a speaking swing after his New York address June 22 with Knox mount-

5 Slain as Pirates Attack Americans In Chinese Mission

By the Associated Press.

Amoy, China, June 15.—An American doctor and nurse, besieged in their seaside hospital by a pirate band, tonight directed a machine gun defense in wnich five were slain.

The dead were three pirates and two policemen, the latter part of the defending force which had lain in wait for the attack, expecting that the pirates would seek to rescue their chieftain, Ti Chui Hop.

Ti was lying wounded in the hospital following a gun battle with the police of Amoy.

Neither Dr. C. H. Holleman, of Chicago, the superintendent, nor chief nurse Jean Neinheiss, of Holland, Mich., was hurt. The hospital, belonging to the board of foreign missions of the Reformed Church of America, with headquarters in New York, was not damaged.

$15,000,000 Paid to Veterans Here, Trade Boom Is Expected

Mail Carriers Make Evening Deliveries of Bonus Bonds

Postmen from the Franklin Station paraded down Pennsylvania Avenue with the registered mail packets containing bonus bonds for veterans who stayed at home awaiting the carriers' visit.

400 Postmen Work Late to Deliver Bonds to Eager Ex-Soldiers.

Sensible Spending Of Fund Predicted

District Beneficiaries to Cash Small Checks, Save Certificates.

A fortune in Federal bonds was distributed among World War veterans in the ashington area yesterday and last night.

To the City Postoffice was given $15,000,000 in "baby bonds" for 25,833 veterans. By midnight Postmaster Vincent C. Burke was able announce that bonds had been delivered to 21,057.

"That is about 85 per cent," Burke said. "I am tickled to death, and I want to thank the press, the Government officials and the veterans organizations for their cooperation."

Burke explained that those veterans to whom bonds were not delivered were not at home. Many of them were night workers, who made arrangements to get their packets today. One nonchalant veteran had "gone fishing."

Most to Pay Debts.

Reporters who trailed some of the letter carriers as they delivered the bonds learned that the veterans, for the most part, felt like E. C. White, an erstwhile A. E. F. warrior in Central, New Mex., who printed an advertisement in a weekly newspaper, saying:

bonus will be paid next week. If I "Notice—To all my creditors: The have overlooked anyone to whom I owe, please send statement and account will be paid at once."

That was the program: To pay debts, buy things needed and make a "nest egg" of the rest.

In most cases, the carriers found the World War veterans out on the porch or front steps. Frequently, a small boy would run ahead to guide them to where daddy was waiting.

"Hey, Santa Claus, this way!" cried many a veteran.

Four hundred letter carriers in the Washington area, having done a day's work, set out at 5:30 p. m. to deliver the brown paper packets bearing the bonds. Under the regulations, the veteran himself had to sign the registered mail slip; hence the late delivery.

The $15,000,000 in bonds distributed in this area was part of $1,650,000,000 given to 3,518,000 veterans throughout the country as "back wages"—that is, as wages they might have received while they were in uniform during the World War.

It was the final pay-off on the adjusted compensation act of 1924 and the 1931 act permitting veterans to collect 50 per cent of the value of the service certificates. Payment of the last 50 per cent was authorized by the present Congress.

Most Contain Checks.

Most of the packets delivered to veterans yesterday and last night contained Treasury checks for a sum less than $50. Thus one veteran, to whom was due $768.36, received $50 bonds totaling $750 and a check for $18.36.

Throughout the city late yesterday veterans were seeking to cash these checks. Some of them explained that they felt that a mild spree was in order. These same veterans, however, took a more serious attitude with respect to their bonds, which may not be cashed for a couple of days at least.

There was every indication that a majority of veterans who planned to convert their bonds into cash would use the money in a sensible way. Many of them said they would pay off long-standing debts. Some planned to use the money as the down payment on a house. One veteran immediately set aside part of his bonus to pay a physician who had delivered a baby to his wife recently.

Prepare for Boom.

Automobile dealers and merchants in other lines looked for a boom here before the week was over, and were making preparations accordingly.

Out in Kansas City, John A. Brody, regional manager of the Veterans' Administration, said that his observations indicated there would be no "bonus sprees" such as took place in 1931.

"Veterans are five years older than in 1931 and have experienced a depression," said Brody. "You'd be surprised how their attitude toward spending the bonus has changed. Veterans generally are adopting a sane spending policy."

The first man in Washington to receive his "baby bonds" was Patrick J. Luby, of Elizabeth, N. J., who was wounded in France by

4,200 Payless As 'Hill' Battle Ties Up Wages

'Blue Monday' Observed by U. S. Clerks as Deficiency Bill Goes Unpassed.

Although yesterday was the biggest Government payday in the Nation's history, due to the delivery of millions in bonus bonds, it was only blue Monday for 4,200 National Park Service employes, whose salaries were held up by a legislative tangle.

Every Washington worker in the buildings branch, from Chief Charles A. Peters, jr., down to rookie charwomen, went payless because of Congress' delay in enacting the relief-deficiency bill. The measure provides $423,000 to meet the June 15 and June 30 payrolls.

The present fiscal tangle sprang from two unrelated events. One was the almost unprecedented rate of building rental by the Government during the fiscal year which is drawing to a close, boosting the monthly rent bills far beyond the point anticipated when the budget was drafted two years ago. The second was the death of Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, which brought a Congressional recess and delayed passage of the deficiency bill.

Creditors Disappointed.

Forty-two hundred building guards, elevator operators, messengers, mechanics, clerks and administrative executives were not the only ones disappointed.

Electric and gas companies, real estate agents and other creditors involved in the operation and maintenance of privately-owned office buildings leased to the Government have not received payment of their monthly bills since April 1.

"I have had conferences with them," said Peters, "but I wouldn't say they are pressing us. Business firms whose rent, gas and electric bills have gone unpaid realize nothing can be done until the deficiency bill is passed."

Every legal means was considered to pay off the buildings branch staff—salaries are given precedence over maintenance bills—but in vain, said Peters and other National Park Service officials.

The fund shortage first became evident May 31, when money sufficient to give each worker only five days pay was available. Not until the latter part of last week did the employes receive the remaining two-thirds.

Only by taking emergency action

Postal Santas Find Veterans Eager With Plans for Spending

Washington Carriers Greeted by Hospitality of Bonus Recipients; They Report Ex-Soldiers Awaiting Arrival of Bonds.

Washington's letter carriers worked overtime last night, but they didn't mind it. It was worth it to be greeted as they were by the World War veterans to whom they delivered $15,000,000 in "baby bonds."

In their rounds they encountered personal stories that ran the whole scale of human emotions.

In many cases, the carriers were asked to have a drink or a cigar.

But in most cases, the carriers encountered men in middle age, many of them bald, nearly all of them with a definite plan for using that money.

Carrier Alvin A. Wolz won't soon forget his call at 413 I street northeast, the home of Warren S. Cook, 42, a veteran of the A. E. F. Cook was out on the porch with his wife and five small children.

Child Dead.

There should have been a sixth child there. This one was Harold, aged 5. Harold died last week in Children's Hospital of a throat infection.

Former Doughboy Cook didn't have enough money to bury Harold. It looked for a time like the child might have to be buried in Potters James Hunt, of the Second Precinct. Field. Then a policeman, Pvt. advanced Cook enough money for a funeral and a plot of ground in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Cook, a carpenter, who has worked for only 4 weeks in the past 12, was asked what he was going to do with his bonus money.

"Well," he said, "I had promised to buy Harold a two-wheel bike. The first thing I am going to do is pay for his funeral. That was a fine thing that Officer Jimmy Hunt did to loan me the money."

After that, the former soldier said, he was going to by some new clothes for his wife and remaining five children.

On his next stop, Carrier Wolz encountered a happier picture. He was calling on Samuel Davis, 48, a former sergeant in the A. E. F., one of the first men to go to France. Davis was wounded by an exploding shell.

He was in the house at 327 K street northeast when the postman arrived. His sons, Lewis, 12, and Robert, 13, were on the porch. Lewis ran in to break the news.

Davis came out in his undershirt,

Youngest Vet, Soldier at 13, Receives $782

Bonus Cheers Californian; Schumann-Heink Sheds Tears of Joy.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, June 15.—The youngest soldier in the allied armies during the great war—he was so pronounced by President Wilson—got his bonus today. He is Steve Harvey, coxswain from the U. S. motor vessel Kilkenny.

Harvey slipped over the Canadian border from his Seattle home in 1914 and enlisted in His Majesty's forces at the age of 13 years 8 days. He served in France for three years.

On America's entry into the conflict, he was transferred, upon his own request, to the 106th Infantry of the Twenty-Seventh Division of the A. E. F. He served until 1919, when he volunteered in the north Russian expeditionary force.

"Just think of it, I got 782 bucks today!" exclaimed Harvey, holding a telegram received from his Pasadena, Calif., residence, announcing safe delivery of his bonus.

Veteran, Traced Through Bonus Papers, Arrested

To Walter G. Terrell, 47-year-old veteran, yesterday came the unhappy experience of being the first recipient of bonus bonds to be arrested.

Back of the postman who brought Terrell his bonds stepped Detective Sergt. Gene Davis, with a warrant charging forgery of a $10 check more than a year ago.

"Mr. Terrell," said he postman, "I have a package of bonds for you."

"That's surely great," replied Terrell, who lives in the 200 block of I street northwest.

He signed his name as Joseph Terrell.

"You'll have to sign Walter Terrell if you want the bonds," the mailman pointed out.

"O. K.," answered Terrell.

When he had finished, Davis stepped up.

"I was looking for you, too; I've got something different from bonus bonds," he said.

Terrell, who won the Purple Heart and was gassed in the Argonne Forest 18 years ago, turned his bonds over to his family and went to headquarters. He was traced through the Postoffice on his bond application.

"Good luck comes just like that," he remarked, "and then good luck goes out the window!"

First Colored Student Since '79 Is Admitted to Naval Academy

For the first time since 1879, a colored student was admitted to the Naval Academy as a midshipman yesterday.

He is James Lee Johnson, jr., of 1737 S street northwest, a graduate of Dunbar High School and the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lee Johnson.

An appointee of Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, Johnson passed the physical examination and was among the 45 candidates admitted. Previously he had made high marks in his entrance tests in academic subjects.

At the time he was appointed to Annapolis, Johnson was a junior in the Case School of Applied Science, at Cleveland, where his grades were described as "outstanding."

Johnson was sworn in as a midshipman at the Academy at 3:30 p. m. yesterday.

He will begin his preparatory "plebe" work at once.

An appointee of Former Representative Oscar DePriest (Republican), of Illinois, was barred from entering the Naval Academy several years ago because he failed in physical examination, having defective eyesight.

Ben. O. Davis, jr., son of Col. Ben O. Davis., sr., highest ranking colored officer in the Army, and a native of Washington, was graduated twenty-fifth in his class at West Point only last week. He also was an appointee of Representative DePriest.

It was after his graduation from Dunbar that Johnson decided to enroll at Case.

He participated in athletics at Dunbar and also at the Ohio University. Throughout his scholastic career he has had an interest in the Navy.

His brilliant scholarship record won the attention of Representative Mitchell.

President Back, Ready to Study Party Platform

Also to Write His Acceptance Speech This Week; May See Boat Races.

President Roosevelt returned to Washington after a 4,000-mile speaking tour yesterday. In the days remaining before the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia he will discuss the party platform, write his acceptance speech, to be delivered June 27, and handle the business incident to adjournment of Congress—if Congress adjourns.

The President possibly, if the situation permits, will take time out to attend the Harvard-Yale boat race Friday at New London, Conn. From there he may go to his Hyde Park home, and then come to Washington before going to Philadelphia.

With the campaign getting under way early, Mr. Roosevelt is expected to be away from Washington for a considerable part of the time between now and November. On July 3 he will dedicate the Shenandoah National Park in Virginia, and on July 4 he will speak at Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson.

Consideration of the Democratic platform is of first importance on the Presidential schedule. Drafts already have been written, but they must be gone over again and again before they are presented to the resolutions committee of the convention for final action. Active in platform drafting is Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, who sponsored the NRA, labor and housing legislation. The Wagner influence is expected to be strongly felt in labor and housing planks.

Tentative plans of President Roosevelt call for a cruise this summer to Campobello, N. B., a stay at Hyde Park, and a campaign tour that will take him to the Pacific Coast.

The President did not go to his office yesterday, but Secretary Harry Morgenthau, jr., was a luncheon guest at the Mansion. He was met at the train by Postmaster General James A. Farley, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and Morgenthau.

On his trip, the President made speeches in eight States—Tennessee, Alabama, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia.

War Debt Defaults Pass Billion Mark

The amount of war debts in default to the United States by 12 European countries last midnight passed the billion-dollar mark.

From $966,333,724, the total moved up to $1,160,122,766 as the countries defaulted, with the exception of little Finland. The Finns made their usual payment of $164,315.

The semi-annual debt date passed without other incident to disturb the routine refusals, except for the receipt from Turkey of its first $100,000 installment toward a settlement of American World War claims.

This has no direct relationship to the war debts, but is a payment under the Turko-American agreement of 1934, in which Turkey agreed to pay $1,300,000 in 13 annual installments to pay off damage claims from Americans whose property was requisitioned by Turkey for war purposes.

Former Governor Files As Landon's Successor

Topeka, Kans., June 15.—Favoring the Townsend old-age pension plan and distribution of productive wealth, former Gov. Jonathan M. Davis filed declaration today of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Kansas. Davis was Governor from 1923 to 1925. He also said he favored a law providing one-half of 1 per cent beer.

Davis was the second Democrat to file. Walter Huxman, of Hutchinson, was the first. As yet no Republican has filed to succeed the Republican Presidential nominee, Gov. Alf M. Landon.

Presbyterian Assembly To 'Ignore' Secession

Philadelphia, June 15 (U.P.).—The Presbyterian General Assembly headquarters here indicated tonight that the secession of fundamentalists from the mother church would be ignored.

There was no official statement from high church officials, but it was learned that they regarded the formation of a new denomination as a "local matter."

Meantime, groups of fundamentalists headed by Dr. Gresham Machen, president of the Westminster Theological Seminary, proceeded with plans to organize congregations and churches in all sections of the country.

The new church is called the Presbyterian Church of America. The parent denomination to the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A.

G. O. P. About-Face for State's Rights to Merit a Footnote in History Books.

By Franklyn Waltman

BY adoption of a platform dedicated to the promotion and defense of State's rights, the 1936 Republican National Convention is assured of at least a footnote in the history books of future generations, even though no further long-range significance flows from that conclave.

WALTMAN.

In the hurry and bustle of the convention and due to the fact that disclosure and adoption of the platform coincided with the nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon as the Presidential nominee, the full import of its espousal of State's rights have generally been overlooked.

Never before has the Republican Party, which traces its lineage back to Alexander Hamilton, proponent of a strong centralized Federal Government and opponent of Thomas Jefferson, gone so far to champion State's rights and local self-government as it did this year. Seldom has the Jeffersonian Democratic Party gone farther.

The reason for this about-face on the part of the Republicans is that the Democrats, under President Roosevelt, previously had espoused the Hamiltonian theory for a strong centralized Federal Government, even though the President, prior to his election, had preached the gospel of State's rights.

Perhaps it should be said that the real turning point from the traditional positions of the two parties came three years ago this month when Mr. Roosevelt launched his NRA, AAA, PWA, HOLC and other alphabetical programs lodging power over the lives of Americans in the Washington Government to a greater extent than ever before.

It was but logical that the opposition party, despite its past history, should protest against this new trend, especially when many citizens found centralization of power in Washington so distasteful. Consequently it might be said that the Republican platform this year was shaped by what Mr. Roosevelt did three years ago.

The Republican platform, which is not a long document as national political platforms go, recognizes the rights and responsibilities of the States in ten separate places. State's rights runs like a threat through this platform from beginning to end.

In the preamble the Republican platform condemns the New Deal Administration because it "constantly seeks to usurp the rights reserved to the States and to the people."

The first promise made in the platform is a pledge "to maintain the American system of constitutional and local self-government and to resist all attempts to impair the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States," and so on.

In the matter of relief for the unemployed, the platform promised "the return of responsibility for relief administration to nonpolitical local agencies familiar with community problems," and went on to impress on the States their responsibilities as well as their rights, by declaring that "a fair proportion of the total relief burden to be provided from the revenues of States and local governments."

The Republicans would center a system of old-age pensions in the States, the latter matching the Federal contribution. In addition, the platform asserted "we propose to encourage adoption by the States and Territories of honest and practical measures for meeting the problems of unemployment insurance."

The most-publicized, and perhaps the most far-reaching, step of the Republicans in behalf of State's rights came in the labor plank which, among other things, pledged the party to "support the adoption of State laws and interstate compacts to abolish sweatshops and child labor, and to protect women and children with respect to maximum hours, minimum wages and working conditions."

The platform held "this can be done within the Constitution as it now stands," but Gov. Landon, in his historic telegram to the convention before he was nominated, asserted that if that opinion proved erroneous "I shall favor a constitutional amendment permitting States to adopt such legislation as may be necessary adequately to protect women and children in the matter of maximum hours, minimum wages and working conditions."

In the matter of farm relief the platform contained a plank which proposed a national land-use program, which, however, in its execution was subject to the "approval of the legislative and executive branches of the States concerned."

Again, in formulating a taxation program, the Republicans promised to give consideration to the State and local tax systems. Finally, the platform declared for the construction by the Federal Government of headwater storage basins to prevent floods, subject to the "approval of the legislative and executive branches of the governments of the States whose lands are concerned."

Gov. Landon also is running on another State's rights plan, not included in the platform, but projected by him several weeks ago. It declares, in effect, that the liquor traffic and prohibition constitute a subject over which each State should exercise jurisdiction as its people think best and that the part of the Federal Government should be restricted to protecting those States which choose to be dry against liquor shipments from wet States.

This has become such a mechanized, scientific age that even the applause at national conventions is recorded. The results of Columbia Broadcasting's "demonstrometer" at the Republican National Convention are now revealed. Nobody at Cleveland reached 100 decibels or sound units on the calibrated tube.

John Hamilton, nominating Gov. Landon, received an applause which registered 85 decibels, the maximum. Senator Arthur Vandenberg, shouting "Stop Roosevelt," was next with 78, and Herbert Hoover was third with 75 decibels. Senator Frederick Steiwer, the keynoter, received at one time an applause which registered 60 decibels, much better than Representative Bertrand H. Snell, the permanent chairman, whose greatest applause registered only 33 decibels. Mr. Hoover gets the laurels for the longest demonstration, one of 36 minutes and 15 seconds, with Mr. Hamilton second, at 26 minutes and 50 seconds.

Mrs. Roosevelt Attends Picnic For Farm Folk

Merrymakers From Three States Crowd Roads to Grayville, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

Grayville, Ill., June 15.—With obvious appreciation in her voice, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt faced a crowd of thousands of sweltering farm folk standing in hot sunshine, hazy with dust, today and thanked them for the huge picnic in her honor.

"I've never seen such a picnic," exclaimed the wife of the President, here on a visit. "I've had a delightful time and I'm going back East with new ideas on how to put on a picnic."

And what a picnic it was! As daybreak came, farmers and their families in new cars, in chugging old models, in trucks, in mule-drawn wagons, even afoot, began converging on the D. F. Frost farm, a mile out of town, where through the joint efforts of Grayville and the counties of White, Wayne, Edwards and Wabash, the picnic was held.

Some of the picnickers had been on the road since before daylight. They came from southeastern Illinois and nearby sections of Indiana and Kentucky. Some were in their Sunday best, others in work clothes. Young and told turned out.

In the audience that banked solidly around an especially built platform where Mrs. Roosevelt spoke, were numerous white heads and children held aloft by grown-ups for "a look at Mrs. Roosevelt."

A bent, little old woman sat timidly on the edge of the low platform and smiled toothlessly. Near her was a young mother with five children.

A small boy captured a front row standing space and held it by means of vigorous elbow action.

An 87-year-old Civil War veteran, Edwin Galbeath, of Greenfield, Ind., who explained he "just had to come, heat or no heat," attracted Mrs. Roosevelt's attention.

At an interval in the program she slipped down from the platform and shook hands with him. His watery eyes lighted with a smile.

Small boys perched in nearby trees. Other youngsters found vantage spots atop cars.

—one expedient was to convert for salary utilization money which was earmarked for rent payment—did the building branch succeed in raising the pay-roll balance which was distributed last week-end.

Building branch employes outside Washington received their checks yesterday as usual, but the field force numbers little more than 5 per cent of the staff personnel.

The pending bill appropriates a total of $891,740 to enable the buildings branch to survive through the remaining two weeks of the fiscal year. Of this figure, $425,000 will go for salaries and the rest to liquidate due and overdue maintenance expenses.

It will be two or three days after the President signs the bill until salary checks are in the workers' hands, officials declared yesterday. That much time is required to prepare the checks and perform other routine which cannot be started until the measure becomes law.

Hull Condemns War as Means To Attain Aims

Secretary, in Brown U. Talk, Urges Youth to Seek Better World.

Vigorously asserting that the standards of international morality have been "reduced" to a "low level," Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday said that "recourse to war as a means of attaining the aims of national policy is an unmistakable symbol of bankrupt statesmanship."

In a speech before the graduates of Brown University, Secretary Hull made a forthright assault on the ancient precept, "In times of peace, prepare for war." His point was that, while such preparation has been proved necessary countless times, the "grim counsel" of that thinking has made war's inevitability overshadow peacetime. He said:

"It lends to peace the aspect of a purely negative concept. It makes peace merely an interval between two succeeding conflicts, characterized by an absence of war, yet constantly overshadowed by its impending doom."

He then argued for an informed and enlightened public opinion that would remove the Nation from "the mercy of blind chance," and stated as even more necessary than learning, knowledge and understanding, a broadly based belief in the "moral fundamentals of good human relations which go into the making of character."

Publishers Aim To Prove Plots By Rasputin Aid

Defendants in Suit Brought by Ex-Monk Promise to Substantiate Charges.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 15 (AP).—Counsel for two book-publishing companies told a Supreme Court jury today he would prove Sergius Trufanoff, a former Russian monk, plotted against Rasputin in the last days of the Romanoffs.

The Viking Press and the Garden City Publishing Co. are defendants in a $100,000 damage suit brought by Trufanoff, a former monk known as Illiadore, who unfrocked himself after being imprisoned by Rasputin and came to this country in 1922.

The plaintiff, a short, thick-set man with powerful shoulders and an imperial mustache and beard, sat with an interpreter in the front row as his counsel in his opening statement asserted a book entitled "The Mad Monk of Russia" libeled him.

Denies Statement.

Norman P. S. Schloss, his counsel, said the book depicted him as "a forger, a seducer, and a filthy-mouthed, vicious, disreputable person."

He denied the statement by the author, Rene Fulop-Miller, Austro-German historian, that he was responsible for the nearly fatal stabbing by a girl of Rasputin, whom he described as "the real ruler of Russia."

Wolfgang Schwabacher, defense counsel, said the defense would prove the truth of every statement the book made about the plaintiff.

Tracing his client's history, Schloss said he was born in Russia in 1380 and became a monk priest and was given the name of Illiadore, meaning "something out of the sun."

Suppressed by Rasputin.

Illiadore, Schloss said, was favorably impressed by Rasputin and after an investigatoin hailed Rasputin before a meeting of church dignitaries. He said the book falsely stated that Rasputin had been beaten at the meeting and forced to confess.

Rasputin, through his great power, the attorney said, had Illiadore imprisoned. After a year in jail the monk unfrocked himself and was released. He left the church because it was controlled by Rasputin, Schloss said.

In 1914 he fled to Norway when he was accused of treason against Rasputin and wrote a pamphlet attacking Rasputin.

He said Illiadore did arrange to have Rasputin kidnaped for a time until his influence on the Czar and Czarina could abate.

Hour, Wage Bill Facing Battle; Hearings Open

Healey Cites Stand of Landon; Denies Plan Smacks of NRA.

By the Associated Press.

A session-end fight over hour and wage regulation shaped up yesterday as the House Rules Committee considered giving right of way to the floor ot the much amended Walsh-Healey Government contracts bill.

The political aspects of the long-pending legislation cropped out during the first day's hearings before the committee. Fending off Republican thrusts at the measure, Representative Healey (Democrat), Massachussetts, co-author, reminded Representative Lehlbach (Republican), New Jersey, that his party's national convention adopted a plank on minimum wages in its plaftorm.

Moreover, Healey said, "your candidate (Gov. Landon of Kansas) went a step farther and said if it were not possible to have them under the Constitution he would favor an amendment."

"Oh, that was for State wage laws," Lehlbach retorted. "It was for decentralization, not centralization. We are against monopoly, but this makes for it."

In its present form the measure would require principal contractors —manufacturers or distributers— selling the government $10,000 or more in goods to observe an eight-hour day and 40-hour week, pay prevailing wages in the locality, employ no person under 18, and ban convict labor, sweatshops, home work or "kickbacks" of wages.

As the bill by Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, was approved by the Senate last year, it contained requirements which Healey conceded under questioning by Representative Mapes (Republican), Michigan, would have set up many standards existing under the old invalidated national industrial recovery act.

Although Healey denied there was anything in the revised bill which smacked of NRA, he agreed under Lehlback's questioning that it probably would affect 75 per cent of the country's industry. Lehlbach insisted this was another way to impose NRA requirements.

Healey and Representative Citron (Democrat), Connecticut, replied no one had to bid or accept Government contracts, but insisted that if they did the Government had a right to say what labor conditions they should observe.

Klaw Is Dead; Was Famous Booking Agent

Once Partner of Erlanger, He Passes in England at Age of 78.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 15.—Marc Klaw, former partner in the theatrical firm of Klaw & Erlanger, died yesterday at his home in Sussex, England, it was learned here today. He was 78. Death followed an attack of heart disease and a day's illness.

As theatrical booking agents, Klaw & Erlanger brought Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson to this country, and booked Fanny Davenport, Grace George, and the Augustin Daly Co., headed by Ada Rehan and John Drew. Gadski was among the singers they sent on tour.

Extending their activities to production, they staged "Ben Hur," "The Merry Widow," "The Pink Lady" and "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway."

Organized Booking Field.

The firm organized the Chaotic Booking Field. In 1896 the partners formed the famous booking syndicate, with which Charles Frohman was associated.

Then the Shuberts came to New York, and a bitter duel was begun. Finally Klaw & Erlanger had to share the field with the Shuberts. The partnership was dissolved in 1919.

Klaw was born in Paducah, Ky., in 1858. He started to be a lawyer, and was practicing in Louisville in 1881 when Gus Frohman, brother of Charles and Daniel, gave him a case that focused his attention on the theater. It concerned a hunt for pirates who were producing a play without paying royalties.

Klaw moved to England seven years ago. He is survived by his widow, the former Blanche Harris, an Englishwoman whom he married at 67, and two sons of his first marriage, Joseph Klaw, of New York, and Olonzo Klaw, of Croton Falls, N. Y.

His first wife was the former Antoinette M. Morris, of Boston, who died several years ago.

Inventor Slain

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

D. McFarlan Moore, 67 years old, retired electrical engineer and inventor who was found on the lawn of his home at East Orange, N. J., mysteriously shot.

Daniel Moore, Noted Inventor, Is Shot to Death

Mystery Shrouds Slaying of Former Associate of Edison.

By the Associated Press.

East Orange, N. J., June 15.—Three clews—a description of a mysterious stranger, three sharply defined footprints and a discharged pistol shell—gave detectives their only leads tonight as they hunted the slayer of 67-year-old Daniel McFarlan Moore, one-time associate of Thomas A. Edison.

Moore, retired electrical engineer and a noted inventor in his own right, was killed early today by two bullets fired into his head following an argument in the rain with an unidentified man on the lawn outside his home. Police Chief C. N. Dell said flatly it was murder, but 12 hours later he had found no motive and said he "had no suspect in mind."

Mrs. Earle M. Taber, a neighbor, told police she heard voices as though men were quarreling and a moment later heard two shots. She then heard someone running along the gravel driveway, she said, and looking out her window saw Moore's body on the ground.

Police found four footprints in the soft earth nearby. They said one was definitely that of Moore, but that the others were larger. A policeman was stationed to guard them until the ground dried sufficiently for impressions to be taken.

The shell of one bullet also was found near the body. Powder burns showed the second shot was fired at close range and Chief Dell expressed belief it was used to make certain of death. Dell said the second shell probably was left in the pistol.

The description given police was of a man who called at the Moore home last Sunday night. The inventor's daughter, Beatrice, 24, told authorities the stranger went away when she told him her father had retired but later, she said, she saw him walking up and down in front of the house.

She then told her father of the visitor, she said, and Moore, after looking out the window, said the man appeared to be one with whom he had talked about inventions three years ago, police related.

The investigators disclosed later that Miss Moore told Sunday night's visitor her father planned to leave the house between 6 and 6:30 a. m. today to go out of town. Moore, rising early to drive to Bethlehem, Pa., to attend a funeral, was killed about that time.

Police also disclosed the man was tall and thin, but declined to give other details of Miss Moore's description.

After attending Lehigh University, Moore became asociated with the United Edison Manufacturing Co. and for four years was closely associated with early electric light installations on land and sea.

He organized the Moore Electrical Co. in 1894 and later the Moore Light Co. He was vice president and general manager of both companies for 18 years, then both companies were absorbed by General Electric Co.

He received his first patent in 1893 and more than 200 before his death. He was a close associate of Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson in the development of television at the General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y., going there to develop the neon lamp used in the television receiver.

A company attache said today his work in that direction was invaluable to television success.

Moore was a fellow of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, member and past chairman of the Illuminating Engineering Society, and member of the New York Electrical Society, American Association for the Advancement of Science, Society of the War of 1812 and Orange Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution.

He married the late Mary Alice Elliott, of New York, in 1895. A son, Lieut. Elliott McFarlan Moore, a member of the Naval Reserve Air Corps and vice president of Catalina Island Airways, was killed in an airplane crash at Catalina Island, November 2, 1933. Lieut. Moore was the son-in-law of Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, who died in the Akron disaster.

would be lifted Sept. 1 and would save Ohioans approximately four million dollars in the last quarter of 1936.

Gov. Davey said that the loss to the State would be offset by the amount which the general sales tax will raise this year, estimated to yield from three to five million dollars more than anticipated.

The Governor's proposal may be introduced in the form of a bill when the House of Representatives meets Wednesday afternoon.

Soviet Cuts Interest On Savings Accounts

Moscow, June 15 (AP).—Soviet Russia cut the rate of savings account interest in half today.

Hitherto the depositors had received 6 per cent. Under an order issued by the Council of People's Commissars the rate will be 3 per cent after July 1.

A statement accompanying the order said the decision was taken with a view of strengthening the ruble and for the purpose of reducing the cost of credit.

More than 400,000 workers have savings accounts averaging 500 rubles ($100) or more. Official figures give the total of all savings accounts at 2,960,000,000 rubles ($592,000,000), an increase of 1,000,000,000 rubles over a year ago.

Hoover Agents Retirement Bill Voted in Senate

Similar Measure, Passed in House, Provides Service Privileges.

By the Associated Press

A bill to give civil service retirement privileges to J. Edgar Hoover's Justice Department's agents was passed yesterday by the Senate.

ate and a similar bill passed the House a short time later.

Just before the Senate, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, asserted that unless the method of making appointments for the Bureau of Investigation was changed he would seek to investigate the entire Justice Department.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, author of the retirement bill, championed the cause of the Federal agents against Wheeler's onslaughts. The test came when a motion by the Michigan Senator to continue consideration of it even after the expiration of the calendar period was passed, 33 to 28.

Passed by Voice Vote.

The bill itself was passed by voice vote. It goes to the House.

Vandenberg contended the agents were "superbly organized" and "risked their lives" while other Government workers who enjoy retirement privileges sat "in comfortable swivel chairs."

"No merit system was ever more scrupulously administered inside the civil service than that of the Federal Bureau of Investigation," he said.

Wheeler denounced investigators generally and pointed to the career of Gaston B. Means, now confined to Leavenworth Penitentiary for a swindle in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping.

"Hoover served in the bureau at the same time as Means," the Montanan said, asserting that during that period, when Harry Daugherty was attorney general and William J. Burns bureau head, the offices of members of Congress were broken into by Justice Department agents.

"Trend to Spy System."

He said he "deplored" a "tendency during the present administration toward a national spy system." Expressing no direct criticism of Hoover, he warned that allocation of broad powers to a group of investigators would be bad public policy.

Wheeler contended that men who indefinitely associate with criminals are "brought down the ladder eventually." He added:

"Unless there is some change in the method of appropriating money to this bureau, to be spent in the underworld with little or no accounting, I am going to ask for an investigation of the Department of Justice at the next session of Congress."

Labor Act

to States to regulate production, and to the Federal Government to regulate interstate commerce.

Two incidents were cited:

(1) Utah Power and Light vs. Pfost, as follows:

"One who produces or manufactures a commodity, subsequently sold and shipped by him in interstate commerce, whether such sale and shipment were originally intended or not, has engaged in two distinct and separate activities. So far as he produces or manufactures a commodity, his business is purely local. So far as he sells and ships, or contracts to sell and ship the commodity to customers in another State, he engages in interstate commerce. In respect to the former, he is subject to regulation only by the State; in respect to the latter, to regulation only by the Federal Government."

2. The Guffey coal case, decided by the Supreme Court of the United States May 18, 1936, as follows:

"We have seen that the word 'commerce' is the equivalent of the phrase 'intercourse for the purpose of trade.' Plainly the incidents leading to and culminating in the mining of coal do not constitute such intercourse. The employment of men, the fixing of their wages, hours of labor and working conditions, the bargaining in respect to these things—whether carried on separately or collectively—each and all constitute intercourse for the purposes of production, not of trade. The latter is a thing apart from the relation of employer and employe, which in all producing occupations is purely local in character.

Extraction of coal from the mine is the aim and the completed result of local activities. Commerce in the coal mine is not brought into being by force of these activities, but by negotiations, agreements and circumstances entirely apart from production. Mining brings the subject matter of commerce into existence. Commerce disposes of it."

Effect Too Remote.

The New Deal had predicated its labor act on the theory that production of goods was only the first step in shipping them. But the court said "the possible effect (of a strike that stopped production) on interstate commerce is too remote to warrant Federal invasion of the State's rights to regulate the employer-employe relation.

"Nor is it important that the employer imports part of his raw materials in interstate commerce and sells and exports a large part of his product in interstate commerce, which imports and exports would possibly be stopped by a possible strike."

Resondent, the Jones & Laughlin Co., is the Nation's fourth largest steel company, with total assets listed at $180,000,000. The two major plants are at Pittsburgh and nearby Aliquippa, where 10,000 men work. The company also operates in New Orleans.

The Labor Relations Board charged that 12 employes were dismissed from the Aliquippa plant for union labor activities.

Police Were Called Out.

"Strong-arm" tactics, the labor board asserted in its plea, were used to prevent unionization, with State police called out at one time in 1935 to restore peace in the strife-torn steel community.

Of the 12 men allegedly dismissed, 10 testified before the labor board hearings, at which the steel company refused to participate.

The labor board ruled the corporation illegally restrained employes' organization and sought a court ruling to enforce its order that Jones and Laughlin reinstate the 10 former employes with back pay, and that there be no further interference with union activities.

Jones and Laughlin attorneys argued that the employes were dismissed for inefficiency and infractions of company rules; that the steel plant at Aliquippa was not engaged in interstate commerce and therefore not subject to Congressional authority, and that the entire labor board authority was unconstitutional.

Hospital Mysteriously Delays Zioncheck s Release to Today

All in Readiness to Carry Him to Waiting Auto for Secret Destination When Plan Is Called Off; 'Sick Man,' Says Attendant.

Elaborate plans to move Representative Marion A. Zioncheck from Gallinger Hospital were thwarted yesterday by a mysterious, last-minute setback. But the Washington State Democrat, under new arrangements, will leave the institution some time this morning, according to Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent.

Everything was in readiness yesterday to whisk Zioncheck to an announced destination. Newsmen gathered outside his psychopathic ward and an automobile of the District government was backed to the door. Hospital attendants scurried from building to building and Dr. Bocock prepared a lengthy statement, believed to have contained a report on the erstwhile playboy's mental condition.

But the statement was not released—and neither was Zioncheck. Dr. Bocock, after announcing progress of his plans at intervals throughout the day, suddenly appeared and told waiting reporters that "everything is off."

He said "unforeseen circumstances" forced hospital authorities to postpone plans for the departure. Bocock would not enlarge on his statement but told reporters to come back today.

Preparations for Zioncheck's removal aroused excitement throughout the psychopathic wings. As the car was backed to the door, nurses and doctors gathered at windows and patients in nearby buildings watched with interest.

A request came to photographers not to take pictures until Zioncheck had been placed in the waiting auto.

"We are going to carry him out," said a spokesman for the hospital. "After all, he is a sick man."

There were no further indications as to where authorities planned to take their congressional patient. It was evident, however, that hospital officials planned to keep his destination a secret until after he left the institution grounds.

Only once did Zioncheck make his presence known. When someone opened a door of his ward, he shouted uncomplimentary names at a reporter.

Yesterday was the day authorities had promised a report on Zioncheck's mental condition. For more than two weeks the former Capitol Hill cutup has undergone sanity examinations. Dr. Bocock refused to say whether Zioncheck would be released unconditionally or merely be transferred to another institution.

Three Fliers Dead In Florida Storm

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 15.—Three Coast Guard fliers on storm patrol duty lost their lives today in a blustery tropical disturbance which isolated several south Florida communities by floods.

The Coast Guardsmen, Lieut. Charles Martin Perrott, pilot, Radioman Walter O. Morris and Mechanic William D. Eubanks, were killed when their plane plunged into Tampa Bay near St. Petersburg.

The storm, of slight intensity, passed from west to east across the extreme southern tip of the peninsula and went out over the Atlantic Ocean.

The season's first disturbance brought deluges of rain, but little wind, forcing streams out of their banks, flooding highways and streets of lower West Coast towns.

New Coal Bill Is Reported Out By Senate Unit

House Vote Today on Guffey-Vinson Plan Forecast by Bankhead.

Coal miners and operators who have feared Congress would adjourn without enacting a substitute for the Guffey coal act, held unconstitutional, yesterday saw the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee report out the new Guffey-Vinson coal control bill. At the same time, Speaker Bankhead announced the measure probably would be called up in the House today.

The Senate committee voted nine to five in approving the bill. Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, reported, but he declined to say how individual members were recorded. "It was not a party vote," he said.

Senator M. M. Neeley (Democrat), of West Virginia, hurriedly prepared a majority report.

"The present bill," he said, "is substantially a redraft of the act of 1935 with the labor provisions deleted in accordance with the view of the majority of the Supreme Court.

Would Rescue the Industry.

"Representatives and spokesmen for the mine workers have made it clear that notwithstanding their disappointment over the failure of the labor regulations of the former act, they desire this legislation to the end that the industry itself may be rescued from the merciless competition that has demoralized it."

Pressure for passage of the bill has increased since the United Mine Workers served notice they would shut down the industry if attempts at wage-cutting result from failure of the bill to pass. John L. Lewis, president, told the Senate committee Saturday he knew certain operating groups were planning to cut wages in the event the new bill did not become law.

Before reporting the bill, the Senate committee changed the so-called "compliance tax" provision to a flat excise levy of 1½ per cent of the sale price of coal at the mine, plus a 13½ per cent levy on all bituminous coal in interstate commerce or directly affecting interstate commerce. Producers who comply with the code prescribed in the bill will be eligible for rebate of the entire 13½ per cent levy.

In the administrative phases of the bill, two members were added to the five-man Bituminous Coal Commission, charged with enforcement of the measure. It was stipulated that none of the commissioners may have any direct or indirect financial interest in the coal industry. The original wording merely provided that two members of the commission would represent the operators and two the miners.

The life of the bill was limited by the committee to two years. Lignite coal was stricken out, and does not come within provisions of the measure.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, who introduced the bill in the Senate, predicted it would be passed by both Houses before the end of the week.

Life Terms for Foes Of Reich Threatened

Ebersberg, Bavaria, Germany, June 15 (AP).—Lifelong detention in concentration camps of "incorrigible enemies of the state" was threatened today by minister of the interior Adolf Wagner in a speech here.

He told the audience: "The Munich Gestapo (secret agents) recently cleared out a nest of Communists. They turned out to be old offenders whom he had set free in the belief they would not transgress again.

"But now I am determined that enemies caught a second time shall never be let out of concentration camps. They will have to remain there the rest of their lives."

Wives, as Usual, To Guide Bonus Cash Spending

Veterans Families to Buy Necessities as Well as Luxuries Here.

Some of the bonus money paid out in Washington yesterday undoubtedly will go for radios, automobiles, fashionable new clothes and vacation trips, but a lot of it will be used to buy milk for pale, fast-growing children, to pay overdue rent, to have tonsils removed and to take some families off relief for at least a little while.

And women, credited with controlling the spending of more than three-fourths of all money which changes hands in the United States, have no intention of loosening their grip now that their husbads have been presented with "baby bonds."

"After we get our debts paid there won't be anything much left," said Mrs. Laurence Forsice, of 735 New Jersey avenue, yesterday afternoon. "We owe a $50 grocery bill, we've borrowed from my husband's brother and my brother, and we owe the American Legion for some food checks, and then I've got to have some eyeglasses and the children, three of them, need their tonsils out. * * *"

By the time Mrs. Forsise stopped for breath she had practically spent the $629 her husband expected to receive as bonus. He drew $324 some time ago, when Mrs. Forsise was ill.

Insists on Paying Bills.

"We'll certainly be glad to get the rest of it even though we won't get much good out of it," said the veteran's wife. "Several people have told us we're silly to spend the money on debts, but I say, 'No sir, those bills have got to be paid the first thing if they take every single cent.'"

The Forsises have five children: Lawrence, jr., 13; Virginia Margaret, 10; Donald Lewis, 6; Phyllis Catherine, 3½, and Beverley, 21 months.

"They don't realize, hardly, what it means," said their mother as she smiled down on her little brood. But young Lawrence spoke up and said part of the money is to make well an arm he injured at school recently. He can barely use it now.

Forsise went to work as usual yesterday at Hodges restaurant, 407 Ninth street northwest, where he has been a counter man for nine years. But he got home early in the afternoon and settled down to wait for the mail man's important visit.

The veteran enlisted in the Army before the United States entered the war. He didn't get to France.

The family of John Combs, at 802 D street southeast, was in more suspense than most yesterday. Combs didn't know how much bonus money he was to receive.

"I can't get les than $550," he explained, "but I might get a couple hundred dollars more. You see, I had to cash in half of mine when the wife got sick, but I paid back $240. Some say I won't get credit for that."

Combs, who enlisted at the age of 17, is now partially disabled and has four small children, was philosophical about the whole business. He hopes to be able to save the bulk of his "baby bonds."

"We'll need the money to look after the children," put in Mrs. Combs. There are four of them—Richard, 8; John, 7; Thomas, 5, and little Linda Lou, 3.

"It's kind of like a birthday present for him," said Mrs. Combs, looking at her husband. "He'll be 38 tomorrow."

Combs moved toward the truck which he uses "to pick up an extra dollar now and then."

Sickly Since Service.

"Whenever he's able to work," added his wife after he'd driven away. "There isn't a lazy bone in his body, but he's been sickly ever since he was in the Army."

And then she told of a night during wartime in Norfolk, Va., when the Monticello Hotel and several other buildings burned. The weather was bitterly cold. Combs, with other soldiers stationed there, was ordered out for guard duty. All the heavy clothing had been sent to the men overseas and the young soldiers in Norfolk had on only their underwear and khaki uniforms. When their guard duty was over four of them were sent to the hospital, suffering from exposure. Combs was the only one who ever came out.

"He gets a pension," said his wife, "and we try to live on that. But the bonus will go a long way toward taking care of our children."

The Harper family is going to use its "baby bonds" to start a restaurant.

"That's the business I'm used to and now I want a little place of my own," said Charles Harper, 409 G street northwest. His wife had gone downtown to preview some of the new clothes she hopes to buy.

"Oh, sure, part of the money will go for clothes," laughed Harper. "My wife wants to get some new things for herself and children and I guess I'll buy myself a few duds."

He was to receive $789.50. Like many another veteran he had already drawn half the amount due him.

"Since I was overseas three years I lack only $4 of getting the biggest bonus given," Harper explained. He served with the Eightieth Division in France and with the Army of Occupation in Germany.

At home with him yesterday while he waited for the mailman were his three children, Charles, jr., 7; Jacqueline, 5, and Alfred Claude, 3.

"You just wait till we have a restaurant all our own," he told the excited youngsters.

"I sure am lucky that I don't owe more than a few dollars," he added. "I feel sorry for those poor devils who will only have their bonds for a couple of days."

With Smiles They Greet the Bonus

Left, Paul K. Patton, 10 Third street southeast, holds his son on his lap and says: "The first thing I'm going to do with my money is to dress my wife and this kid up." Michael Verano (center), carpenter, 323 B street southeast, received his bonus packet from Mail Carrier L. S. Gray. "I don't know what I'm going to with my money," he said, "but I'm going to be careful where I invest it." (Right) Alfred D. Nicholson, 47, War Department clerk, embraced his wife Hilda, just after he had gotten his bonus bonds. "I don't know what I'm going to do with mine," he said. "All I can say is that I'm darned glad to get it."

day with tears of joy today, not so much for herself, but because——

"My boys are getting their money today."

She took it as a personal compliment that the Federal Government should select this day, her birthday, to deliver the bonus to World War veterans. For nearly 20 years the soldiers have been as close to her heart as her own children. Her own money and her once-golden voice both were given lavishly to help "my beloved soldier boys." So her seventy-fifth anniversary will be one to remember, she said.

It thrilled her to have a small army of children and grandchildren at her home and to realize that she is embarking on a new career in the movies.

The diva has six living children. The eldest, in Germany, is herself a grandmother. Four of the children and five grandchildren assisted at a surprise celebration yesterday. It consisted mainly of ripping open hundreds of congratulatory messages from all parts of the world, and finding vases, dishes, pails, tin cans—every conceivable type of receptacle—in which to put the loads of flowers.

But what she said she enjoyed most of all was the newspaper headline, not about herself but about the delivery of the bonus.

275,000 in New York.

New York, June 15 (AP).—In the fat mail sacks of 5,000 postmen the bonus was brought today to some 275,000 World War veterans in the metropolitan area—and the veterans told many a human, earthy story as to what they'd do with the money.

Louis Kahn, for example, had it all carefully thought out. "I'm going to save $1,500 for my two kids and take the $35 and have a party. My wife wants to come, but I don't think she will."

John Adamec—"Hire a room, get cleaned up and get some clothes. I've been out of work for five years and haven't had a regular home."

August Miller—"Got a date with my wife to buy her a new wardrobe."

George M. Hutton (a process server—"To pay my debts; it will just about put me on my feet."

Wendell Hammer, sadly—"It's already spent."

Needs Fingerprints.

Savannah, Ga., June 15 (AP).—All Brickmason John Harrison Warrick needs to get a soldier's bonus is a set of fingerprints. He went to war when he was young and was fingerprinted. When he came back he learned to be a brick mason and his fingerprints wore off.

It didn't bother him until he got a letter notifying him he was eligible for a bonus. Warrick marched into county police headquarters, dabbed his fingers in ink and then on paper. The print was a black smudge.

"Go back home," the police advised. "Grease your fingers daily and wear gloves when you work."

Warrick followed instructions for two weeks and tried again.

"Still not legible," said the police, but they added that a ghost of loops and swirls were beginning to appear. Warrick will keep trying.

Veteran Seeks Creditors.

Silver City, N. Mex., June 15 (AP). E. C. White, World War veteran at Central near here, inserted this advertisement in a weekly Silver City newspaper:

"Notice—To all my creditors: The bonus will be paid next week. If I have overlooked anyone whom I owe, please send statement and account will be paid at once."

$307,000,000 in Midwest.

Chicago, June 15 (AP).—The mails carried a fortune of more than $307,000,000 tonight for some 575,000 World War veterans in the Seventh Federal Reserve district.

The Chicago postoffice, clearing house for bonus bonds and checks and bound for former soldiers in the district, reported tonight it had received 488,905 bonus envelopes from the Veterans' Administration in Washington and that about 90,000 more were expected in the next day or two.

They will be placed in the hands of veterans in Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Federal Deficit Hits New Peak Of 34.4 Billions

Bonus Bonds Increase Total 1.6 Billion; Record Peace Financing Completed.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury announced last night the national debt had soared approximately $2,700,000,000 to a new peak of about $34,400,000,000 after completion of a record peace-time financing operation and allowing for bonus bonds.

The bonus bonds shot the debt up $1,800,000,000—the amount issued for delivery to war veterans. Additional transactions from the bonus payment may influence debt figures somewhat later on, the Treasury indicated.

The debt also skyrocketed from sale of $1,106,000,000 in Treasury obligations to amass cash for payment on bonus bonds and supplement reserves for relief expenditures.

It was a busy day for the Treasury. In addition to the cash subscription to recent offerings of a 2¾ per cent bonds and 1⅜ per cent notes, the Government retired $1,025,000,000 in maturing obligations through conversion into the new issues.

Also included in the huge turnover of funds was payment of $70,000,000 in interest on the debt and routine transactions approximating $65,000,000.

The net result of the public debt transactions will be to increase the public debt to approximately $34,400,000,000, as of the close of business June 15," the Treasury said.

This peak may be scaled down as bonus bonds are presented for payment, cash for which has already been raised through the sale of securities dated yesterday.

Goodwill Industries Helped 5,000 in Year

During the first year of its existence, the Goodwill Industries of Washington reecived contributions of old clothing and household articles for approximately 5,000 persons, it was announced yesterday by W. Harold Snape, executive secretary.

Handicapped men and women were employed to renovate the merchandise, which is sold at the four Goodwill stores. The money is used to pay wages to the employes. Last week's pay roll, Snape said, amounted to $73.

First Veteran To Get Payment Not 'Impressed'

P. J. Luby, of Walter Reed, 'Guesses' a Sergeant Selected Him.

The first man in the United States to be presented formally with bonus baby bonds—a patient at Walter Reed Hospital—was singularly unimpressed with the ceremony and still doesn't understand how or why he was chosen to symbolize the paying of the adjusted compensation to all World War veterans.

"I guess a sergeant picked me out," said Patrick J. Luby shortly after U. S. Treasury certificates amounting to $768.07 were placed in his hands at 9:30 a. m. yesterday.

"What sergeant?" he repeated. "I don't know who he was. What difference does that make? These bonds are worth just as much as if a general had said, 'Luby, you be first.' And they aren't worth any more if I'd been the last man instead of the first. So what difference does it make?"

"Ordinary Soldier."

But the certifying officer of the bonus payment at Walter Reed, Maj. J. M. Huddleston, knew how the whole thing had happened. He knew that Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, the man who sponsored bonus payment legislation in Congress, had chosen Luby.

When Patman was asked to select one person from a group at Walter Reed he chose "a common, ordinary soldier."

Luby, a sad-eyed Irishman, served in the Army 19 years and says he'd be a soldier still if an airplane accident hadn't sent him to the hospital 27 months ago.

"Army life is a fine life, and I don't know what I'll be doing when I get out of the hospital," he sighed as he fingered the cane which has helped him to walk ever since osteomyelitis set in in his ankle bones. "They tell me I'll be leaving here soon, but I've made no plans for spending the money aside from buying myself some clothes and paying up a few debts."

Luby, who enlisted in the Army early in 1917, has no family. He never married.

"I was a regular soldier," he said. After a moment's thought he added, "and I'd like to keep on being one, but of course I can't get back in the Army now," and he looked at his bandaged right foot and leg.

Drew Half In 1931.

The Irishman, who came to this country in 1911 and worked in Detroit automobile factories until he enlisted, would have received $1,565 yesterday if he hadn't drawn half his compensation in 1931. He doesn't remember now why he drew on his bonus, but says it seemed a good idea at the time.

He fought in five major offensives "Over There" and suffered only a shrapnel wound. A young army surgeon, Lieut. J. M. Huddleston, dressed the wound. Yesterday when Luby stepped forward to receive his bonus from Postmaster Vincent C. Burke, the officer certifying the bonds jumped up and said:

"Why, I knew you in France."

And in that instant Luby recognized in the certifying officer the surgeon, now a major, who dressed his injury in a hospital just back of "the line." Yesterday was the first the two men have met since that incident 19 years ago.

In adition to fighting in France, Luby served with the army in the Philippines and Panama. At the time of his discharge 27 months ago he was a mechanic in the air corps.

Arab Terrorists Fire on Soldiers

Jerusalem, June 1 (Palcor Agency).—Guns and torches continued to terrorize the Holy Land today despite the stern steps of British authorities to stamp out anti-Jewish violence.

Two Jewish truck drivers and one British constable were injured when a military patrol was fired upon near Jenin, a communique stated. The troops replied with machine-gun fire.

A band of Arab terrorists invaded an orange plantation near Ben Shmen, tied and beat the watchmen, then destroyed a fruit-bearing area of 25 acres which had been developed over a period of many years.

Snipers attacked several Jewish settlements last night, despite severe penalties for such offenses ordered by the government.

MEALS OFTEN FAIL TO GIVE NEEDED INTERNAL EXERCISE

ALL-BRAN Relieves Common Constipation*

Meals that are low in "bulk" are a common failing of the average American diet. Frequently, these meals result in irregular habits.

Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" is often a consequence. This condition causes discomfort, and may lead to headaches and loss of appetite. Even serious disease may develop.

Banish the danger of a diet low in "bulk" by eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly. This delicious cereal is an abundant source of gentle "bulk."

Within the body, it absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass, which exercises and strengthens intestinal muscles, and cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and contains iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily, with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

How much pleasanter to enjoy this natural food in place of pills and drugs. Serve ALL-BRAN in some form each day, either as a cereal, or cooked into muffins, breads, etc. Eat it regularly for regular habits.

ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

shrapnel and who is now in Walter Reed Hospital. His bonus arounted to $768.07.

The bonds were turned over to Luby by City Postmaster Vincent C. Burke.

To Put Most in Bank.

A native of Ireland, Luby said he expected to buy some clothes, visit a brother in New Jersey and put what money is left in the bank.

The first nurse to receive her bonds was Miss Jeannette Blech, now stationed at Walter Reed.

The delivery of bonds to other veterans was deliberately held up until 5:30 in the afternoon the better to find them at home.

Considering the proportions ofthe undertaking—the greatest mass delivery in history—the Postoffice Department appeared to be doing its job with a minimum of hitches.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said at his press conference that there are "bound to be" some errors in the bonus shipments. He added, however, that he did not think the number would be large.

It was reported that the Postoffice Department had sent out 15,000 bonds by mistake. Postmasters were instructed not to certify these for payment. In some cases, it was said, the packets had been improperly addressed, and in others contained the wrong number of bonds. There also were many instances where veterans, thinking their applications had gone astray, sent in new applications, thus complicating matters at the Veterans' Administration.

War veterans probably will begin receiving Government checks in exchange for their bonds tomorrow. To get checks they must certify their bonds for conversion into checks.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, chief of the Veterans' Administration, has joined with other officials in urging veterans to hold on to their bonds until the date of maturity, June 15, 1945.

Each bond carries a table to show how 3 per cent, spread over nine years, can add to the value of the bond. The table follows:

June 15, 1937	$51.50
June 15, 1938	53.00
June 15, 1939	54.50
June 15, 1940	56.00
June 15, 1941	57.50
June 15, 1942	59.00
June 15, 1943	60.50
June 15, 1944	62.00
June 15, 1945	63.50

1,302 Bonuses Are Distributed At Alexandria

Arthur L. Giles Gets First Bonds; Admiral Hamlet to Address Rotary.

Bonus bonds, delivered yesterday to 1,302 persons living in and near Alexandria, totaled $367,985.32. Approximately 950 deliveries were made to Alexandrians, while the remainder went to those on rural routes served from the local postoffice.

Arthur L. Giles was the recipient of the first bond delivery, at 5:30 a. m. Charles B. Edmonds, of 423 Queen street, was the second, and Capt. H. W. Raines, 510 Prince street, was the third. The carriers completed their delivery at about 2 p. m.

Many of those receiving bonds went immediately to the city postoffice and turned them in for redemption. They were promised that not more than 48 hours would elapse before they received checks from the Richmond Postoffice, which has been designated as the "paying office" for this section.

The postmaster, J. Owen Lynch, assisted by five clerks and Jones Cox, finance office of the American Legion Post, were kept busy certifying the bonds and issuing receipts.

Bonus Recipient Ordered by Court To Pay His Family

Although Congress specially exempted soldiers' bonus bonds from attachment by creditors, Joseph H. Fields, a real estate salesman, may have to part with a portion of his bonds in the District Supreme Court next Monday, if a ruling by Justice Oscar R. Luhring goes unchallenged.

Fields was called into court yesterday by John T. Graves, attorney for Mrs. Elizabeth Fields, who charged her husband with being in arrears $1,300 in maintenance payments. Graves emphasized that Fields, a former service man, would receive his adjusted compensation this week.

"This man has a moral obligation to support his minor child," Justice Luhring said, as he signed an order directing Fields to return to court Monday and make arrangements to pay.

limping on a cane. He was so excited he had trouble signing the registered mail slip.

"Am I happy?" he cried. "Don't I look happy."

A clerk in the Veterans' Administration, he said he would use his bonus money to pay off the mortgage on his house.

Jeremiah Downey, of 741 North Capitol street, a bluejacket, who made 18 trips across the Atlantic aboard the U. S. S. De Kalb, was at the door of his apartment, when the postman arrived.

"Boy, am I glad to see you," he said to Wolz.

He said he was going to use his $765 to pay the doctor bills of his wife and 8-year-old daughter, Dorothy. His wife, he explained, had been ill for four months.

What remained, the former jack tar said, would go in the bank. He is employed at the Central Auto Works, 443 I street northeast.

A number of veterans, to make sure they would be identified, gave taverns as their addresses.

Ralph Summerfield Arrison, 49, a former advertising man, was located by the carrier in a liquor store at 705 North Capitol street. He received a bonus of $485 and said he was going to buy a few bottles of good liquor for his friends and then take a trip to the seashore.

Plans to Visit Mother.

Antoni Frankaker, a waiter in the New Haven Grill at 45 H street northeast, wore a large grin as the bonus bonds were placed in his hands.

Born in Constantinople of Greek parents, Antoni said:

"I am going to cash just enough money to visit my mother in Balos, Greece. I haven't seen my family in 24 years. This is the first time I have had enough money to do it."

One man on the bonus list apparently was not much interested. At his home, it was said he had gone fishing.

Carrier L. S. Grey probably had the most startling experience of the 400 who trudged their routes last night.

The veteran to whom the bonus bonds were addressed met Grey at the door.

"I don't want 'em! I don't want 'em!" he screamed.

His mother, a kindly faced woman with silver hair, tried to quiet him.

"I don't wan't 'em!" he persisted. "I owed my life to my country. It isn't fair to take it. It's blackmail."

His mother turned to the carrier.

"He was shell shocked over there," she explained.

She persuaded her hysterical son to sign for the bonds, and she accepted them.

Police Escort.

The only carrier who had a police escort was Charles Preston, a veteran in the postal service, whose route is at the foot of South Capitol street.

Michael Varano, a carpenter, of 322 B street southeast, had his little curly-haired boy of 3 with him as he waited for his bonds.

"I lost $800 in the bank crash," he said. "I'm going to be doggone careful before I invest any more."

A dignified man answered the door at 319 B street southeast. He was Charles A. McDonald. He was visibly moved as he took the packet.

"Thank God," he said. "What am I going to do with it? I have a sister in Chicago. That's where my money's going."

Many of the veterans said they had no definite plans. Peter Jones, who lives on East Capitol street, was very emphatic as to what he would do with his.

"I'm going to buy a yacht," he said, "and I'm going to Florida and laugh at the world and forget my worries—as long as the money lasts."

He got a fat bonus—$1,585. That meant he had not collected 50 per cent of it in 1931.

'Walk Light' Inspection Fails to Impress Hazen

Having made a personal inspection of the operation of the "walk lights" at Twelfth and Thirteenth streets and F street northwest, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday announced he doesn't think much of them.

Commissioner George E. Allen recently said he would bounce on his head from the White House to the Capitol if the lights proved worthwhile.

"George doesn't have to worry about that head-bouncing act," Hazen said.

District Suffrage.

Washington's appeal for suffrage made little impression upon the Republican National Convention. Friends of the District were given no encouragement in their campaign for a constitutional amendment permitting local residents to elect Senators and Representatives and to vote for national candidates. Indeed, the attitude of the convention seems to have been decidedly hostile to the idea.

The vote against increasing the District's delegates to the next G. O. P. convention from three to six affords an index of the prevalent sentiment. Even though the committee on rules recommended the change, it was rejected by an overwhelming chorus of "noes" on the convention floor. Sufficient was said to indicate that a majority of the States emphatically refuse to consider granting the District a status similar to their own, even for the purpose of electing convention delegates.

The question of representation for the District will likewise be presented before the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia. There is little hope, however, that the movement will meet with any more success than it did at Cleveland. It may be argued that the attitude of the States toward the disfranchised citizens of Washington is entirely unreasonable, although impartial students of government see two sides to the issue of opening the Senate to representatives of the Capital City. That aside however, the District has nothing to lose by recognizing the situation as it is, and trying to make the most of it.

Numerous improvements may be made in the District's government without adoption of a constitutional amendment creating a sort of city-state with no local sovereignty. The District might be granted a spokesman on the floor of the House where most of its legislative difficulties arise. The local government ought to be further consolidated, with an extension of the Commissioners' authority over purely municipal functions. As Commissioner Allen has suggested, referendums might be used to determine the will of the people on important questions. Moreover, the Budget Bureau should be divested of its arbitrary veto power over the District budget, and the muddle over fiscal relations between the Capital City and the Federal Government should be cleared up.

Since national representation at best is a remote issue, attention might be much more profitably centered upon these immediate possibilities of improvement.

A Red Letter Day.

Yesterday will remain a memorable occasion in the minds of veterans. The bonus money for which they have waited 18 years, together with a generous premium of advance interest, reached the pockets of many. Debts can now be paid, desired necessities or luxuries can be purchased—or savings and investments can be enhanced.

Unfortunately, a number of veterans are in real need of this money to provide themselves and families with food, shelter and other essentials of life. But to the overwhelming majority the bonus comes as a pure windfall. The situation is virtually as though 3,518,000 endowment insurance policies had been suddenly made payable nine years before the date of their maturity. Many veterans will be tempted to regard their good fortune as an opportunity for a fling which they have heretofore been unable to afford.

The thoughtful veteran will recall, however, that the nature of the bonus has not changed much by reason of prepayment. Congress originally withheld payment of the adjusted compensation on the theory that if it were permitted to accumulate interest for 20 years it would serve as a "nest egg" for former soldiers. The veterans insisted that they should be custodians of their own reserves. Congress finally yielded to that point of view. Now the veterans are being paid both the principal obligation and the interest up to 1945. Hereafter the conservation of these resources will be entirely up to them.

No doubt a great majority of veterans will prefer to cash their bonus bonds, even if they plan to invest the money. In their exuberance over these new riches, however, it would be well for them to remember that this largesse comes as a miracle which cannot be repeated. For spendthrift and prudent veteran alike, the bonus is now finished business.

The Future Of Public Works.

In common with all other depression-ridden countries the United States has found that a public works program, even one involving the expenditure of billions of dollars annually, is of itself no remedy for unemployment. When generous allowance is made for the stimulus to basic industries afforded by such projects, the cost per job created remains high while the decrease in unemployment is all too likely to be transitory. The restoration of private business activity still remains the only adequate way permanently to reduce the numbers without work.

A fundamental criticism of the WPA is its refusal to recognize the inherent deficiencies of a public works program. The moral which Mr. Hopkins has drawn from the inability of PWA to provide large-scale employment is apparently that the careful standards established by Secretary Ickes should be broken down. The WPA is, of course, nothing but a completely haphazard and unplanned public works undertaking with various boondoggling projects thrown in to fill up the chinks. Its failure in providing any lasting relief of unemployment is the more glaring because of the vast expenditure involved.

None the less there is obvious social and economic value in public works programs, both Federal and State, when they are carefully planned and when too much in the field of employment provision is not expected from them. The main consideration is that such undertakings should be considered as auxiliary rather than primary measures from the viewpoint of unemployment relief. That was the thought expressed some years ago in the "prosperity reserve" program, which sought to defer public works construction in time of prosperity in order that the accumulated needs might be thrown into the breach in periods of depression.

Now it appears that the country is getting back to this realistic and healthy conception of the part which can be played by public works.

The Republican platform envisages the issue clearly when it pledges "undertaking of Federal public works only on their merits and separate from the administration of relief." Partly as a result of this approach, it is foreshadowed that the Democratic platform will disinter the "prosperity reserve" idea, buried since the Hoover Administration, and dress it up in the guise of public works "planning." Presumably, also, slum reclamation operations, whether Federal, State or municipal, would be included in the New Deal concept of public works as an election issue. This is the more probable because the Republican platform nowhere mentions the subject of housing explicitly.

The portents are, therefore, that the election, whatever its outcome, will concentrate intelligent attention upon the whole subject of public works, and what they can and cannot do in the field of unemployment relief. Such an outcome is the more to be desired because there is already in existence, in the shape of the National Resources Committee, a body entirely competent to put the "prosperity reserve" idea into actual operation. Through its State planning agencies the National Resources Committee could readily make reliable inventories of desirable public works of every character, suggesting their relative priorities in a way which should command Congressional approval. Indeed the committee is now engaged on a study of this general character in the field of waterway projects.

The WPA has come close to boondoggling the whole argument for public works into disrepute. For that reason the Republicans are to be congratulated for drawing the all-important distinction between socially desirable public works and those undertaken only as an excuse for relief payments. The Democrats now have the opportunity to follow up this distinction with some constructive suggestions, if they can at this late date dissociate themselves from the disastrous WPA technique.

The Wisdom Of Learning.

Sunday was Baccalaureate Sunday. Throughout the land college and university leaders gave their last words to nearly 140,000 young men and women who this year end their academic careers. One point stands out in scanning reports of the addresses. Most of them contained only the barest minimum of those empty generalities commonly attributed to commencement speeches. Gone were the academic precepts of easier years: Sunday's addresses talked briskly and to the point.

At Harvard, President Conant warned his graduating class of the defeatism of the times and urged them to see beyond this and recognize their responsibility for facing the social problems of the day. President Angell at Yale declared that the future of the Nation, of its culture and social order, will be "measurably decided" in the months between now and November. At Princeton, President Dodds held up fascism and communism before his seniors and presented arguments for rejecting both in favor of "old-fashioned liberalism." The same urgent concern with the immediate future was voiced at many smaller institutions.

The sum of it is that the gownsmen need no instruction from politicians on the questions before the Nation. And what is more, they are quite competent to propose answers for them. The logic of their words is ample rebuff to the shallow ridicule currently offered the academic profession, a typical example of which appeared in Senator Steiwer's cheap sneer at "professors" in his Cleveland speech. Perhaps it is not without significance that the Oregonian's ill-timed reference to bookworms did him more harm than those against whom it was aimed.

G. K. C.

For well over a generation Gilbert Keith Chesterton flared like an unquenchable Roman candle across the British literary horizon. Now the republic of letters of which he was so unique an ornament is infinitely poorer by his passing.

In the style and content of his writings Chesterton was worlds removed from Samuel Johnson, whose mantle, by common consent, he was entitled to wear. But like that heroic figure, G. K. C. belonged to the robust tradition in English letters, to that full-bodied and full-blooded school which is so much out of line with the postwar trend toward orgies of introspection and pitiful self-analysis.

Many writers today are content to cultivate beds of narcissus in which curious weeds are watered with the wax-like flowers. Intellectually and emotionally Chesterton lived not in a garden but in that unforgettable flying inn he once wrote about, seated at a table by the crossroads of the world, taking gargantuan pleasure in the feast spread out before him, and with great gusto shouting wisdom and ribaldry at the passersby.

He enjoyed life as a high and hopeful adventure, even though, with brilliant paradoxes, with unfailing vigor and rapier-like wit, he fought unceasingly against its follies. If Chesterton sometimes took inordinate delight in turning accepted truths inside out to prove that the lining was more durable and resplendent than the fabric, it was only because his vast imagination refused to be hampered by accepted commonplaces. With fourth-dimensional intuition he drove on to examine the uncertain foundations of received beliefs. And there is no denying that he well deserved the title of Prince of Paradoxers.

But Chesterton was no mere wordmonger. His intellect was as subtle and as flexible as his language. He illumined everything he chose to discuss—literature, theology, politics, public affairs, morals—in the seemingly endless stream of causeries, essays, novels, poems, tracts and plays that came from his pen.

Before he laid down his pen he had given to the world a brilliant galaxy—Father Brown and "The Man Who Was Thursday," "The Flying Inn" and a memorable series of studies of English men of letters, "Lepanto," "The Ball and the Cross," and dozens of volumes of controversy, some of which are to be ranked among the best in the language.

A protean yet permanent figure has joined that company of immortals which gaily follows the leadership of Chaucer across the sparkling landscape of English literature.

Sand In The Bearings.

A man in California has invented a machine which should introduce technological unemployment into a field until now preempted by temperamental unemployment. It is a great juggernaut of a device designed to chug along our beaches, shaving over the sand and filtering it of litter.

In a recent test, this creation covered better than an acre of beach in less than an hour. The outlook is bleak for the beach-combers of Tahiti and other South Sea havens. An outraged protest in their behalf may be expected at any moment, penned, perhaps, by Somerset Maugham or some other of the many writers who have found valuable literary ore in their riparian asceticism.

And, in all truth, it does seem that this newest contraption is overdoing mechanization just a bit. There is no reason for assuming that wheels and pistons applied to everything will make everything better. Enough is enough, as some one sagely puts it.

We've already enough free wheeling that nobody uses. The same goes for mechanical card shufflers. Speaking of which, perhaps the next thing the California man will invent is a three-handed bridge machine for hermits, with a button underneath to engage either the Simms or Culbertson system.

What this country needs now is an insecticide to keep swindlers out of the veterans' bonus bonds.

"Don't put off till tomorrow what you can do today"—for by then there probably will be a higher tax on it, or a law against it.

Cling desperately to your illusions. It's a great life if you don't waken.

A bacteriologist says a germ can live for more than a year on a dollar bill. It must be that although a germ has millions of neighbors he doesn't try to keep up with any of them.

A Stabilizer.

From the Kansas City Star.

Secretary Ickes issues a warning of a violent uprising among the Navajo Indians of northwest New Mexico unless Congress acts to settle a dispute over reservation boundaries. But if Congress should get too busy and fail to act right away, couldn't Mr. Ickes hold the Navajos for a few months with a first class PWA project and a liberal grant?

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

'Flout' And 'Flaunt.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The second paragraph in the preamble to the Republican platform reads:

"The integrity and authority of the Supreme Court have been flaunted."

What they probably meant, and tried to say, was that the integrity and authority of the Supreme Court had been flouted, which is virtually the opposite of what the platform does say.

"Flaunt" is defined in the dictionary: To make an ostentatious display in dress, behavior, or exhibit pertly or impudently; n., the act of flaunting; a boast or brag. While "flout" is defined: To insult, treat contemptuously; jeer; to scoff; sneer; n. an insult, scoff. To flaunt the Constitution would be to make an ostentatious display of a belief in, or an adherence to, or friendship for it. To flout it would be to insult or scoff at it, denounce or deny a belief in it.

It seems that in the zeal of the Republican convention to "save the Constitution" they came near wrecking the dictionary. Where, oh where, were William Allen White and the Kansas literati!

Where, or where, was Chairman Fletcher's staff of "professors?" Important as the Constitution is, the country could get along without it better than it could get along without the dictionary; and, while the Republican battle cry is "Save the Constitution," it appears that the Democrats must raise the battle cry, "Save the Dictionary!" Shade of Henry Cabot Lodge hover over this re-born Republican party and restrain it. ROBERT HARDISON.

An Advancing Nation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the head of our Government are men of matured age with wisdom, who are endeavoring to maintain the doctrines of those who were there years ago.

We have been taught by our parents that aged men are for council and young men for war, and this was held to be true because experience is the greatest school. Yet we realize that these older men have crippled the peace and prosperity of an advancing Nation and a change of leadership is much needed. I don't mean the Chief Executive, but I do mean those who maintain that the Constitution should not be changed.

I wonder if those who are against rewriting the Constitution are willing to wear the old garments similar to the boys of '76? Today those who frame our laws would not permit their hair to be powdered. So also ideas of an advancing Nation must be modern with the vitality of youth and must not be retarded by those of antiquity.

The Constitution as it remains is the thoughts of those who have passed, and good as they have been, these thoughts will not fit or feed the Nation. BERNARD HAYES.

Mr. Farley's Glass House.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those possessing a sense of humor will doubtless be amused at "Jim" Farley's criticism of Gov. Landon's fiscal policies, in view of the changes and inconsistencies that have characterized the present Administration.

Has Farley forgotten that just about four years ago, President Roosevelt was preaching economy, balanced budgets, elimination of waste, etc., only to repudiate them, in their entirety, a few weeks following his election? The reason for this sudden and singular "scrapping" of the platform, upon which he was elected has never been revealed to the public.

In accusing Landon of "advocating currency inflation" has Farley lost sight of the "inflation" of the national debt, at the expense of the tax payers, to unprecedented heights, under the Roosevelt regime? Evidently our Postmaster has overlooked that very ancient adage: "People that live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones."

Mr. Green And Labor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the Republican convention in Cleveland William Green, president of the A. F. of L., again demonstrated his unfitness to represent the working class. He and most of the other officials of his organization have often done the same.

But never before has he so thoroughly proven his lack of merit and disloyalty to the people who pay him his enormous salary as he did at Cleveland. At a time when all honest people, including the Republican Presidential candidate, are demanding a constitutional amendment to curb the powers of the reactionary body known as the Supreme Court, Green, like Borah, actually opposed and helped to prevent the convention from putting such a plank in the Republican platform.

Mr. Green and the A. F. of L. are entirely unfit to represent labor. They are entirely too capitalistic. They, in all probability, would make excellent executives for capitalistic organization as their minds seem to run in the same direction.

Fortunately, the Republican candidate has proved, by advocating a constitutional amendment, if necessary, that he is more in harmony with and better able to understand and speak the sentiments of the working people than Green and Borah put together. More power to him. It looks as if he is capable of giving Roosevelt a real battle.

Not Too Late.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President, when given the reins of government by the people, said by his solemn oath that his plans for government were conformable to, and would succeed within, the then resources of the Federal Constitution. He was accordingly not hampered by any prejudice of any political party, or by any court in the land. Nor did any court protest against his acts till it was shown the court that the working out of the President's plans was destructive of the very powers by which this Nation had developed, and had risen to its present state of greatness.

It is not too late, even now, for the President to repent, confess his error, return to his platform and oath, and enjoy as at the beginning of his term of office the full cooperation of God. But to stubbornly through pride of heart to persist in a continued violation of that vow and oath would be to definitely invite certain defeat.

PATRIOTIC CITIZEN.

Washington, June 15.

Shortage Of Good Men.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As stated before, there are not enough Democrats to elect anybody. It is only when a Democrat acts like a Lincoln Republican that he ever gets in. The Republicans never lose unless they act like a Tammany Hall Democrat. This has been especially true in the past. However, with the wide use of the radio and the increase in window farmers, bench managers and pants with holes in the pockets, there are other influences which until now could be fully appreciated.

The trouble with the campaigns in the past has been the speakers waste too much time talking to postmasters and Government employes, both in and out, who would vote for the Democratic or Republican candidate if the devil ran. The big idea is to convert as many of the great miscellaneous party before we have three parties. This would be a bad mistake because we only have enough good men for one party. J. C. SHOTTON.

Debt Data.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed a letter from a correspondent, published on June 7, in which his statements regarding war debts and defaults are misleading and erroneous.

1. Two governments loaned something approaching $10,000,000,000 each, principally called "war debts," to the Allies.

2. One of these governments, the British, voluntarily canceled about $5,000,000,000 of the principal owing to it.

3. One government, the U. S. A., did not cancel one cent of the principal, and went on record as being opposed to any revision, reduction or cancellation.

4. The debt of Finland is not a "war" debt at all, having been incurred after the war, and is properly a commercial or rehabilitation debt.

In the interest of international fairness and good will, why not publish the exact facts relating to these matters? M. STUART.

Note To Mugwump.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Kindly assure your correspondent, Mr. Mugwump (letter of June 13), that we all agree with him that the successor to the New Deal will have an awful mess to clear up. As for me, I can't see how any mere man can willingly step into Mr. Roosevelt's shoes, or take up residence in our mortgaged White House.

Does remembering "the preceding three long years" reconcile the Mugwump to jumping out of the frying pan into the fire? Going from bad to worse was not what we bargained for when we elected your President. L. L. KERLIN.

Washington, June 13.

'Sound And Fury.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice that Mr. Farley has a lot to say in his attack on Landon.

It makes this writer think of what Shakespeare said about life: "Full of sound and fury signifying nothing." What seems wrong to me is that Tammany Hall is not kept more vividly before the voters of this country. It is very distressing to know that the Capital of the United States had been invaded by members of this gang so much condemned by the best people in New York State and, indeed, the entire country. R. LAPPIN.

Vacation Burglars.

If every man and woman in the world were honest, locks would never have been invented.

There would be no need for bars at doors and windows. Laws would be enacted not to govern human conduct, but merely for the administration of government, which would resolve itself into the orderly and extremely simple relationship of the individual with the body politic. There would be no need for policemen or courts or jails.

Unfortunately, honesty is not so general. Which serves to introduce an important subject of peculiar timeliness.

The summer and vacation season is upon us. Most families will spend part of the summer, at least, away from home. Many of them will pay little attention to the matter of protecting their home and the valuables therein contained during their absence. The knowledge of this common neglect is one of the first principles of burglary and petty thievery. Knaves annually reap a golden harvest in Nashville and elsewhere because owners trust to luck for protection of their homes.

The most efficient police department cannot successfully guard every home every hour. Summer crime waves are doubly hard to cope with because victims many times do not discover their losses until weeks later, giving burglars time to dispose of their loot and cover up their tracks.

Dictators And Calendars

Taken from an article by J. B. Perry Robinson, secretary of the National Calendar Association, and published in the British publication, Mine.

REFORMING the calendar—that rather surprising ambition which possesses a large number of people today—was a favorite pastime of ancient dictators. Indeed, one of the first acts of Sargon invading Mesopotamia or Genghis Khan pouncing on India was to decree a new calendar for the conquered land. For in those days every conqueror brought his own religion, and every religion was based on agriculture, which needs elaborate calendars. In any case, nothing proved the success of a new conquest better than the establishment of a new calendar regulating the lives of everybody in the land.

There is no more convincing proof of the effectiveness of Julius Caesar as a dictator than the fact that practically all the world still uses what is really his calendar. Even the reason why February has only 28-29 days is that Caesar's successor, Augustus, having decided to name the eighth month after himself (as Julius had the seventh, July); could not allow his month to have only 30 days while Caesar's had 31, and so stole a day from February, then the twelfth month, and added it to "August."

* * * *

An old story says that during his campaigns in Gaul Caesar "found himself going into winter quarters as the spring was coming on." There is probably a lot of truth in this jest, for at that time the old calendar of Rome was a very muddled affair, entirely in the hands of the priests, who were not very good astronomers and had let the year as they measured it get far out of step with the sun's year. If Rome had merely remained a small Latin state in the middle of Italy, this would not have mattered much, but she was beginning to spread an empire over the whole Mediterranean, and her merchants were finding that trade on an imperial scale demanded a more coherent and business-like system of dates.

So when he became dictator Caesar established a fixed calendar with the 12 months which we now use, and a fairly accurate leap-year system. How necessary Caesar's reforms were is shown by the fact that the first year (46 B. C.) of his new calendar had to have 445 days before the years could start straight again. In Roman history it was known as the Year of Confusion.

Some say that the Roman Empire has never ceased spreading; certainly its calendar penetrates farther every year into a few remaining un-westernized lands. Yet it is not really a very good calendar. Modern scientific industry and trade find that it has many inconveniences, such as quarters of unequal length (the first generally has 90 days, the second 91, and the last two 92), and months that sometimes have only 22½ and sometimes 23 working days.

* * * *

There is also the very disturbing factor of a widely varying Easter, which throws the chief public holiday of the year backwards and forwards from one month, and even one quarter, to another.

This disturbing arrangement we owe partly to a Council of the Church in A. D. 325, but principally to the next great calendar reformer after Caesar, Pope Gregory XIII, at the end of the sixteenth century. It is actually after him, and not after Caesar, that our calendar—the Gregorian System—is officially named. But so far as the calendar as a whole is concerned, all he did was to tidy up an inaccuracy in Caesar's leap-year method. Caesar had decreed a leap year every four years, which is a little too often, and in the course of 1,500 years the sun had got 10 days ahead of the calendar. So Pope Gregory cut the days between October 4 and 15 right out of the year 1582 and reduced the frequency of leap years thereafter.

Pope Gregory's reforms were at once accepted in all lands where the Roman Church held sway. England adopted the reforms in 1752.

* * * *

That was the last occasion when anybody did anything to Julius Caesar's calendar, so far as this country is concerned. Since the war, however, here, as in most other countries, business men and merchants have been asking for a new and radical reform of it. They and professional men, such as lawyers, schoolmasters and all whose lives are measured in terms, want a calendar which will be the same from year to year; a calendar in which Easter always comes at the same week-end and Christmas is always, say, a Monday. With such a calendar there would never be any need to consult an almanac to discover when, say, the third Thursday in October was (it would always be the 19th) or what day of the week one's birthday will be (it would always be the same). One would have learned the whole calendar in one's cradle, in the same way as one now learns the multiplication table and how to tell the time. A permanent almanac would be engraved on cigarette cases, watches, public clocks, etc.

It is quite simple to achieve such a perpetual calendar. All that is necessary is to make one day in the year a special day to be called by a special name; in other words, have 52 ordinary weeks and then when we come to the 365th day, simply call it New Year's Eve or some such name and not include it among the days of any week. Then the next year and all subsequent years will begin on Sunday.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Pegler Rebukes Pegler.

Of all the maudlin notes sounded during the Cleveland convention of the Republicans the worst, in my opinion, was that struck the other day by Westbrook Pegler in a piece telling how his heart bled for the Republican party in its present lack of gumption, character and political know-how. That was terrible, and I told him so, and he tried to pass it off by saying that it was only a figure of speech. He insisted, however, that a strong, clamorous opposition to the noisy arrogance of the racketeers of the Roosevelt Administration was necessary to stand off the development of a Fascist system of government or some other despotism of similar kind with a patriotic name.

It seems that every time he goes to Washington he discovers more and more expensive house guests of the taxpayers sitting in sumptuous offices with their feet up, chewing cigars, drawing from $4,000 to $10,000 a year and demanding what you are going to do about it. It seems that this burns him up, the more so because he personally knows of a few jobholders in the Administration who are strictly relief cases, not worth a dollar to the country.

He reckons that if he personally, with his limited acquaintance in Washington, knows of at least $50,000 a year in useless jobs in the Capital, the grand total must be something stupendous.

• • • •

I made him admit he mentioned he had never seen one actually sitting with his feet up, smoking a cigar, and that in a good man with a useful brain it would be nothing against him that he did sit with his feet up, chewing a cigar, if he did. And there were only two in sumptuous offices, so far as he could recall offhand, and these offices were built by the Republicans before Roosevelt came in, and undoubtedly would be occupied by Republicans—most likely Kansans—if the Republican Party should ever turn the rascals out.

I asked him if he honestly thought that in the event of Landon's election this fellow Hamilton, of Kansas, as master of the patronage, would be likely to abolish the useless jobs created by Jim Farley and the other brocrats of the New Deal to take care of personal friends and other deserving Democrats. It seems as though a film cleared from before his eyes and he came to. He said, "No!" that he supposed Jim was no worse in principle than any Republican jobmaster under the spoils system, but insisted that Jim had just run hog-wild.

He didn't know, however, but that Hamilton would run hog-wild himself, because the Republicans would be terribly hungry for easy money if they should win, and it is always much more difficult to abolish a useless public job than to create one.

• • • •

"I was in an office in Washington not long ago," he said, "calling on a house agent of the taxpayers who gets $7,500 or $10,000 a yer. He is just a mediocre former newspaper man who never ran a very high score in the business, and the job which he holds in the Government never existed before and need not exist now. If he had the character which deserves $7,500 or $10,000 a year he would not be found in his present job, because his self-respect wouldn't stand for it, and, anyway, he wouldn't have to go to the Government for a guest job. The Government doesn't get the good ones. The Government gets the flops and mediocrities, the lazies and the trade-marked old soaks who are up against it for grocery money.

There is always plenty of sympathy for the notorious rumpots and people are always giving them one more chance. But a sick man can't get around or his pride is too great to permit him to impose on the charitable feelings of his friends, and the first thing anybody knows he sticks his head in the oven and turns on the gas or dies in the charity hospital.

"I was in the city room of the Cleveland Press during the convention," he said, "and I offered to bet that the salary of just one guest of the taxpayers in Washington under Farley's administration whom I could name was consuming more money than the Government received in income taxes from all the reporters, rewrite men, copy readers and telegraphers on all three of Cleveland's daily newspapers. He retires from newspaper work and they support him. What the hell kind of system is that?" he inquired.

• • • •

"Well, I asked, "would it give you any more pleasure to support a Republican former newspaperman in the same job at the same pay?" "No," he said, "of course not, but I don't want to support any guests on such pay. I know of an Army officer killed not long ago, after 13 years of flying, who left a wife with three children, the youngest of them 9 months' old, on a pension of about $40 a month. There are Spanish War veterans getting $75 or $100 a month for years, who never even had a rock thrown at them, merely because they had a toothache 40 years ago or got knocked down by the swinging door of an old-time saloon. If we are going to support guests, hospitality ought to be graded according to the deservingness or whatever you would call it of the individuals."

"Wait a minute; hold still a minute," I said. "You wrote that your heart bled for the Republican Party. Let us get back to the subject. No kidding, does your heart really bleed for the Republican Party and such humble patriots as Ogden Mills and Andy Mellon and the Reids and the likes of George Moses and Jim Watson and this fellow Hamilton of the Landon crowd?"

At that he just curled up and died.

His last words were, "Kill bleeding heart story," but it was too late.

G.O.P. Planks Parallel Opinion Of Public Shown by Polls in Post

Seven Proposals, Comprising Inflation, Budget, Merit System, Pensions, Relief, Supreme Court, Waste, Takes Sides Readers Advocated.

New York, June 15.—Eight planks in the Republican platform adopted at Cleveland take a stand on issues on which the country has previously been polled by the American Institute of Public Opinion. The polls have been reported exclusively in Washington in the Washington Post.

In seven planks the GOP platform takes the side advocated by a majority of those who voted in Institute polls; on one—State's rights—the platform comes out for the unpopular side.

The seven issues on which the platform makers and the voters in Institute polls agree are: Inflation, budget balancing, the merit system, old age pensions, the administration of relief, the power of the Supreme Court, and Government waste.

A comparison between the Republican platform and nation-wide public opinion as reflected in Institute polls follows:

1. Republican platform: "The New Deal Administration constantly seeks to usurp the rights reserved to the States and to the people."

Institute poll reported March 1: "Which theory of government do you favor: Concentration of power in the Federal Government, concentration of power in the State Governments?"

	Fed. Govt.	State Govts.
Nation	56%	44%
Republicans	35	65
Democrats	72	28

2. Republican platform: "We oppose further devaluation of the dollar."

Institute poll reported March 22: "Are you in favor of currency inflation?"

	Yes	No

Missouri's Oldest Town

By William Lyon Phelps

Sainte Genevieve.

I have received an exceedingly interesting letter from Father Bowdern (the Rev. Thomas S. Bowdern, S. J.), written from Saint Louis University, St. Louis, Mo. He writes:

Part of the celebration was the publication of a charming little book of 150 pages entitled "Sainte Genevieve." You must not miss it. It is the kind of Americana that Mencken ought to read for the good of his soul. Out here on the Mississippi we people of the old river towns are a "people with a past."

Sainte Genevieve is a town that knew French and Spanish governors before it knew Americans, and prides itself upon the fact that it was never subject to England. It is still a most picturesque town about 60 or 70 miles down the King's highway from St. Louis. Did you know that, like California, we too have our El Camino Real? It ran, and still runs, on modern concrete from St. Louis to New Madrid (pronounced by the Yankees New Madrid). I motored the length of it clear down to southeast Missouri last week.

Down in the Sainte Genevieve country the Ozarks shoulder their way almost to the river. Their woods are still full of French Creoles, who do not speak English, but a Creole patois. They can speak English of a sort, but they prefer their own patois. And the woods are also full of the old French place names, which the Yankees twist into a grotesque pronunciation—Swashem for Joachim, Sillabor for Isle-au-Bois, etc.

When you stern New Englanders were still punishing yourselves with Blue Sundays and witchcraft there was gracious living out here in these French posts, when the young people had their Mardi Gras and masquerades in Sainte Genevieve and gallant Knights of St. Louis handed their ladies through stately minuets over the river at Fort Chartres. And something of this old world tradition still survives—in Sainte Genevieve.

• • • •

This little book, "Sainte Genevieve, The Story of Missouri's Oldest Settlement," is written by a native son, Francis J. Yealy, S. J. He was born at Sainte Genevieve, and took his doctor's degree in English literature at the University of Cambridge, in England. The book is published by the Bicentennial Historical Committee in Sainte Genevieve, Mo., and I advise my readers to send there for a copy. It is an excellent little book and a contribution to American history. Certainly every one born in Missouri or who has ever lived there should own it.

Lines on Yachting.

A yacht club is a water-front organization devoted to the corroboration of the general belief that ownership of a boat doesn't necessarily involve much travel.

• • • •

It is a group of sunburned gents who are in no hurry in getting between two given points and who would rather talk about a past voyage than engage in a new one.

• • • •

The yacht club proper is a large porch to which is attached a small building for use in case it is too stormy for outdoor arguments.

• • • •

A yacht is any vessel which was bought under a misrepresentation and which can be sold under similar conditions at half the initial cost.

• • • •

The purpose of a yacht is to awe friends, offend creditors and keep the owner in a state of perpetual worry.

• • • •

The head man of a yacht club is called a commodore. A commodore is the same as a humidor only damper. To be a commodore it is necessary to have a blue coat, two pairs of white pants and a personality which makes it possible to go about in a white cap without being accosted for ice-cream cones.

• • • •

The commodore is the one man in the club who really believes the dues are collectable and that a sign "No Bathing Off Float" will be read by swimmers.

• • • •

The only difference between this and the annual autumn cruise is that it takes place before the gin has been watered.

• • • •

Every yacht club is divided into two factions, the power faction and the sail faction. The sailors always sneer at the powerboat men, but the powerboat men are generally moving too fast to notice it.

• • • •

Yachting affords a man an opportunity to sleep uncomfortably to his heart's content and eat under maximum difficulties as long as his constitution will stand it. It is surprising how a yachtsman will squeeze you down a narrow passageway into the cramped interior of a ship designed for Singer midgets and talk for hours about its ample accommodations, its vast roominess and its possession of everything except a grand ballroom, outdoor bathing pool and three-car garage.

Tax Bill

conference, calendars must be cleared away before the final drive to adjourn.

As the tax conference again adjourned, with reports of "no progress," Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, acting head of Senate conferees, threw out hints of a possible agreement today.

Although he remaned closeted with Parker until nearly dusk, he declined to say whether the Senate group would have anything definite to offer the House in the way of a compromise.

"Both sides will have to make some concessions, of course," he said, "or there will be no bill. But don't draw any deductions from that."

He denied the Senate was ready to yield on major points at issue.

Asked for his "guess" on adjournment prospects, Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, another of the Senate conferees, said there was a good chance of adjournment this week "if" conferees could agree today. Senator David Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, also a member of the conference committee, flatly forecast an adjournment this week.

A similarly optimistic view was taken by Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, acting House majority leader, after a talk with the House conferees.

Center of the conference tax fight is the controversial corporate tax section. The House bill provides for graduated rates on undivided corporate profits ranging up to 42½ per cent. The Senate bill calls for a 15½ to 18 per cent corporate income tax, and an undivided profits tax in addition of only 7 per cent.

During five days of conference, the House and Senate committee has canvassed the entire field between these two plans, but has yet to find a common ground. One thing is certain, that neither group will except in toto the views of the other.

The return yesterday of President Roosevelt bolstered hopes of House tax conferees that he will intervene in their behalf. Senate conferees, whose views are not the President's, on the other hand are seeking no White House advice. Prospects are that if the President has anything to say, he will send it through an intermediary, rather than make the White House the scene of another tax battle.

Senate opponents of the Administration tax plan have a very potent weapon in reserve, should Senate conferees capitulate to House demands—a filibuster. It was said in one reliable quarter yesterday that they would not hesitate to use it, if they had to.

Still hopeful of an early adjournment, House leaders called members back into session last night to dispose of private bills.

After succeeding at last in getting his housing bill before the Senate, Wagner, at the request of minority leaders, consented to delay consideration until today. Both Wagner and Majority Leader Robinson said it would pass.

Wagner urged enactment of the measure in furtherance of slum clearance programs already under way, insisting it would not compete with private business. He said the bill would have a beneficial effect not only in aiding the low wage class, but in stamping out crime and disease.

Conferees on the deficiency bill, carrying a $1,425,000,000 relief appropriation, made an initial effort yesterday to iron out differences in House and Senate bills, but adjourned without substantial progress.

Newspaper Facsimiles by Air Are Forecast at Hearing of FCC

Perfection of Radio Channels So That Millions of Citizens Can Operate Own Broadcasting Stations Also Is Predicted by Experts.

By the Associated Press.

Startling developments in the field of radio and television in the near future were forecast yesterday at a Federal communications commission fact-finding investigation.

Equipment capable of sending newspapers through the air to flash on the screen of a receiving set in facsimile or still picture broadcasting was described as being in operation at present.

Perfection of high-frequency, short wave channels so that millions of citizens could operate their own private broadcasting stations was pictured as a possibility.

A parade of experts, technicians and spokesmen for the radio and television industries told of these developments as the FCC began assembling data which it said would form a background for opening up licensing in a broad field of radio not now touched except for experimental purposes.

In opening the informal hearing, Anning S. Prall, FCC chairman, said it was "practicable from a technical standpoint to print the newspaper in the home today" by facsimile transmission.

Because speed always had been a controlling factor in news, Prall said that "newspapers might desire to make use of this system," and hence the FCC should plan ahead for the demand.

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, said that "technically television is an accomplished fact, although it is not yet ready commercially."

He added RCA would begin experimental television transmission from New York City within two weeks, and that only last Thursday a public demonstration of "facsimile transmission between New York and Philadelphia had been successful."

Sarnoff said written, printed, photographic and other "visual matter" had moved with lightning speed and with accuracy. He predicted commercial operation by this method would make the dot-and-dash system of telegraphy as outmoded as the "pony express."

Many persons are mistaken, Sarnoff said, in predicting that television would make present sound broadcasting obsolete. Instead, he said, television will find "new functions, new entertainment and new programs."

Similarly, Sarnoff said facsimile transmission would not displace present "media of information"—"particularly newspapers." Instead, he predicted the new method would be utilized by the newspapers.

The RCA head traced his 30 years of experience in radio and said it was now possible through present facilities for 90,000,000 persons to listen to one voice at the same time.

He added that individual channels for use by millions of persons would follow perfection of present experiments in the high frequency, short wave field.

Sarnoff urged that FCC to avoid "straight-jacket rules" that would cripple private initiative and industry in radio experiments.

Landon Drafts Plans

ing the hustings after his own notification and then Landon, himself, going eastward after he spends most of July with State duties.

Murray, when asked if he thought Landon would be elected, replied:

"Well, you know and we all know there are just more Republicans than there are Democrats and when they get together they always win."

"It will be a dirty campaign, of course," he went on. "I'm trying to avoid that—I don't like a fight."

The handle-mustached former Governor grinned.

"Governor, how did you do it?" the unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1932 asked Landon. "You are like Huey Long—you learned your politics in Oklahoma. You learned where I made mistakes."

Landon Breaks In.

"You didn't make many," Landon interrupted.

"I talked too damned much," Murray retorted.

"No politics is involved—no money deals," Muray told reporters, while Landon smiled. "I just own a 70-acre farm. I couldn't buy anybody off—even if I had the money."

Upholding his ability as a farmer, Murray said amid laughter, "I've got the best corn in Oklahoma—dry not liquid."

Of the Republican platform, Murray expressed approval as "Democratic in principle" of the planks "on finance, on economy, on the question of debts, the League of Nations, the preservation of the Supreme Court and the Constitution, the agricultural planks as far as it goes, and local self-government."

Topekans, still celebrating the nomination of Gov. Landon, generally echoed the words of Hamilton's law partner, Ralph T. O'Neil, former National commander of the American Legion and a Democrat, in their greeting of the new national chairman.

"He sure did a swell job at Cleveland," said O'Neil, smiling proudly.

Band Leads Parade.

The welcoming crowd made Hamilton's journey from the railway station to the Statehouse a grand parade. A band dressed in bright red uniforms led the procession, in which appeared banners bearing such legends as "Welcome home, John," and "Win With Landon." A large banner bearing the former legend was placed above the front door to the Governor's office.

Members of the national committee scheduled to sit in on the board of strategy meeting tomorrow included Henry P. Fletcher, retiring national chairman; Ralph E. Williams, of Oregon; George A. Ball, of Indiana; Mrs. Bertha Baur, of Illinois; Robert P. Burroughs, of New Hampshire; R. B. Creager, of Texas; Representative J. Will Taylor, of Tennessee; Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, of Rhode Island; Walter S. Hallanan, of West Virginia; Charles D. Hilles, of New York; Mrs. John E. Hillman, of Colorado; Daniel Pomeroy, of New Jersey; Mrs. H. H. Sayre, of Oklahoma; Mrs. Marion M. Scranton, of Pennsylvania; Harrison E. Spangler, of Iowa; Earl Warren, of California; Ezra Whitla, of Idaho, and Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, Landon convention floor leader.

Warren and E. F. Colladay, National Committeeman for the District of Columbia, arrived here today and met briefly with Gov. Landon.

A dinner at the Topeka Country Club was arranged for Gov. Landon, John Hamilton and newspaper correspondents.

N. Y. Banquet Planned.

New York, June 15 (AP).—In challenging mood, New York Republicans prepared today to open the Landon campaign in this area with a "unity banquet" June 22, as one of their number dared Senator Norris, of Nebraska, to name the leaders he said remained "hidden" at the Cleveland convention.

Henry Root Stern, former treasurer of the New York State Republican committee and an alternate at large to Cleveland, telegraphed Norris demanding he identify the influences the Senator had asserted would "attempt to buy the electorate."

"Who were the 'octopus-like leaders hidden behind the smoke screen of the convention?' why not be man enough to come out and name them?" Stern asked. "Borah (Senator Borah, of Idaho), did by way of preconvention prophecy, but not since the convention has he dared to repeat the charge, and this was because he was present in Cleveland."

Kansas City, June 15 (AP).—Former United States Senator James A. Reed, Democrat, praised the Republican platform today for its pronouncement against European entanglements and renewed his attack against the New Deal Administration with a warning against "gentlemen who make fine promises and coin glittering phrases."

The former Senator spoke extemporaneously before the National Typewriter and Office Machine Dealers Association in convention here.

"I may be of the horse and buggy age, but I still believe in the teachings of Washington, Hamilton and Jefferson, as against the doctrines of Tugwell, Frankfurter and Wallace," Reed said.

"I am not speaking for the Republican Party, but against this thing we have down here in Washington."

Boston Invites Landon.

Boston, June 15 (AP).—Robert M. Washburn, president of the (Theodore) Roosevelt Club of Boston, announced today he had telegraphed Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican nominee for President, an invitation to appear in Boston under the club's auspices.

Washburn early this year had announced himself a supporter of the candidacy of Senator William A. Borah, of Idaho, for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Fletcher to Go to Europe.

Chicago, June 15 (AP).—Henry P. Fletcher, succeeded last week by John D. M. Hamilton, of Kansas, as chairman of the Republican National Committee, said today he was planning a trip to Europe immediately after his conference with Gov. Alf M. Landon at Topeka tomorrow.

But he's not retiring from politics, the Republican leader quickly added.

"I am going abroad on a journey I postponed for some time but I am tremendously interested in the campaign," Fletcher said. "I will be available to give such service as I can to Gov. Landon's campaign for the Presidency."

candidate, the Rev. J. Clarence Beckley, the runner-up. With slightly less than half the 213 precincts tabulated, Smith had 5,080 votes to 4,202 for Leckemby. They led a field of seven.

Wallace F. Mabee, jr., of Eastport, and Mrs. Katherine M. Hickson, of Bangor, waged a close fight for the lead in a three-cornered contest for the Democratic nomination in the Third Congressional District. As the count moved beyond the half-way mark in the 273 precincts, Mabee had 1,044 votes to 936 for Mrs. Hickson. Ross St. Germain, of Bangor, ran third with 664.

U. S. Representative Simon M. Hamlin, of South Portland, seeking renomination by First District Democrats, had a commanding lead over the Coughlin-indorsed candidate Joseph W. Connolly, of Portland. With 38 of the precincts totaled, Hamlin had 338 votes to Connolly's 147. Charles H. Adams, of Portland, ran a poor third with 71.

The vote for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 258 of the 633 precincts was: Barrows, 15,389; Page, 11,190.

Naturalization Denied Four Aliens on Relief

New Orleans, June 15 (AP).—Four aliens were denied citizenship today because they are on the Federal relief rolls.

Federal District Judge Wayne G. Borah held that their 'admission to citizenship under these circumstances, in my judgment, would do violence to the spirit of the naturalizaion laws of the United States."

"The naturalization laws," he said, "clearly contemplate that an applicant for citizenship, if admitted, should be a citizen in fact as well as in name, hat he should assume and bear the obligations and duties of that statusas well as enjoy its rights and privileges.

Work Is Started On Democrats' Hall for Rally

Auditorium in Philadelphia Hums With Activities of Laborers.

Philadelphia, June 15 (AP).—Democrats took possession of Philadelphia's municipal auditorium and doubled their field office force today in a great surge of activity preparing for the party's convention next week.

Workmen swarmed into the hall and quickly turned it into a vast carpenter shop. Three shifts of men were assigned to perform in five days what ordinarily requires several weeks. Unemployed men and women beseiged national committee representatives, contractors and concessionaires for jobs.

Rentings for private functions prevented an earlier start in the great arena, which is to seat approximately 15,000. To beat the time handicap, workmen prefabricated a lot of the construction in the basement. Result, most of the "rough" work was completed in the first 12 hours today.

Hundreds of feet of guard rail to inclose the delegate section were erected. Just outside the rail workmen threw up bleacher stands with the celerity of a circus tent crew.

A wooden speakers' stand was reared above the orchestra pit, boxes for national committee members rose on th stage, and platforms to accommodate 700 working newspapermen were taking shape.

In the wings of the big stage a policeman stood guard over a board of countless gadgets. His job was to prevent tampering with the public address system. Amplifiers were installed atop the front of the building from where a policeman will attempt to guide traffic.

In the commercial museum adjoining the auditorium carpenters constructed a dome similar to the one on the Capitol in Washington. I will be a feature of the exposition of national progress, said to be the first of its kind ever assembled.

The exposition will depict the whole scheme of governmental activities launched to bring about recovery. Two complete motion picture theaters will be set up to supplement booth displays.

A large shadow box, projecting illuminated pictures, will show how erosion and resultant dust storms may be checked and eventually controlled. The Resettlement Administration has devised an exhibit reproducing in miniature a model resettlement project. A hall of States, 300 feet long, will show the part each State is contributing toward national recovery.

Three more officers and ten clerks joined the staff of the National Democratic Executive Committee which set up headquarters at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel more than two weeks ago.

James A. Farley, national chairman, was expected to go over the preparations during a brief visit Wednesday. He will take active charge Friday. The mezzanine floor of the hotel was outfitted for the quarters of Vice President John N. Garner, Farley and other party officers.

Committee representatives who joined the field force today were John G. Grimes, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Mary C. Salisbury, comptroller, and Mrs. Mildred C. Crowe. The office staff numbered 26 and will be increased to 40 by the end of the week, they said.

Copeland to Shun Democratic Rally

By the United Press.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, said last night he did not consider the present Administration composed of "true Democrats" and doe not intend to attend the party's national convention in Philadelphia.

"They don't need me," said Copeland. "Postmaster General James A. Farley and his gang will be able to get along."

His decision to absent himself from the party conclave was not "strange," said Copeland, "in view of my record of the past two years —I've rarely voted for the Administration."

Copeland would not say whether he will support President Roosevelt for re-election, declaring, "one step is enough for me at a time."

Miss Krenek Is Elected By Maryland Democrats

Marguerite L. Krenek was elected president of the Maryland Democratic Club of the District at a meeting last night at the Kennedy-Warren. The group decided to encourage voting tours to the home State.

Others elected were Jack Diamond, vice president; Carl Monsees, First Congressional District vice president; Pierre Ghent, Second District vice president; Estelle M. Tyler, Third District; Gertrude Feldman, Fourth District; Col. George H. Calvert, jr., Fifth District; Somerville Dawson, Sixth District vice president; Mrs. Roella G. von R. Mills, recording secretary; Mrs. Mary T. Robin, corresponding secrteary and Lieut. Yorke Curtis Mills, treasurer.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills. (Advt.)

Funeral Is Held For Dr. Kramer At St. Stephen's

D. C. School Official Is Buried in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Dr. Stephen Elliott Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools for the District of Columbia, was buried yesterday in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Hundreds were present for the ceremonies and the funeral cortege which followed the casket from St. Stephen's Church where the funeral was held to the cemetery buried was many blocks long.

Dr. George Fiske Dudley, rector of St. Stephen's, conducted both services.

Flags at city schools whipped in the breeze at half staff in honor of Dr. Kramer and schools were declared closed for the day. However, the Franklin Administration Building opened its doors early in the afternoon for a special sessino of the board of education at which resolutions of respect and regret were the only order of business.

The funeral was held at 4 o'clock and the church was crowded with friends and associates who came to pay their last respects.

Flowers banked the grave. Washington cadets representing each high school in the city acted as pallbearers and members of the Public School System and friends were honorary pallbearers.

Eastman Rail Post Extension Likely

By the Associated Press.

Legislation to continue Joseph B. Eastman as co-ordinator of transportation for one year, but without the regulatory powers which the office exercised for the last three years, was put in position yesterday for an early vote by the Senate.

A joint resolution to continue the office for a year was reported favorably by the Senate Commerce Committee, and Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, predicted the Senate would act on it after the Wagner housing act was disposed of, probably early today.

The resolution, as reported, amends the emergency railroad transportation act to provide the administrator with little authority other than to continue studies "to encourage action on the part of carriers and other subsidiaries" toward reduction of costs, improvement of service, stabilization of employment, rehabilitation of the industry and promotion of financial reorganization.

Anti-Lynch Bill Is Sped in House

By the Associated Press.

A petition to force House consideration of the anti-lynching bill by Representative Gavagan (Democrat), New York, yesterday obtained the last of 218 signatures necessary for its success.

Representative Buckley (Democrat), New York, was the 218th signer of the petition, designed to take the measure from the Judiciary Committee.

"This is a great victory for law and order," commented Representative Gavagan, "and a great triumph for a Democratic House."

The bill is similar to, but not identical with, the Costigan-Wagner measure, on which Senate action has been blocked repeatedly by Southern members.

It would make States and political sub-divisions liable for damages and penalties in the event a person in custody of their officers was killed by a mob.

The measure now must lie on the House calendar for seven legislative days before it may be acted upon.

Plan Offered to Revoke Degrees to 'Unworthy'

Philadelphia, June 15 (AP).—A plan to empower universities to withdraw degrees from graduates no longer considered worthy to hold them was advanced today by Dr. Parke R. Kolbe, president of the Drexel Institute at its forty-third annual commencement.

Dr. Kolbe said all graduates should be made to return to their universities and colleges every five years for re-examination, and that the degrees of those who "flunked" should be rovoked.

He expressed the opinion the system he suggested "might lead college graduates to prize their degrees more highly and might stimulate them to better effort throughout a lifetime."

Shorts for Tennis Appear Strongly in Vogue; Many Play Bridge.

By Dudley Harmon.

Guest day at Chevy Chase Club yesterday brought out hundreds of the more sporting members eager to catch up on the tennis, golf and suntans which ten days of intermittent downpours had obliged them to abandon for the time being. The carefully landscaped grounds of the golf course looked even greener than usual after the recent rains and the chairs on the veranda fairly glittered in the sunshine with a brand-new coat of paint.

The vogue for shorts for tennis is definitely on the up and up, to judge from the number which were worn yesterday at "Chevy". Miss Christine Ekengren was playing tennis in shirt and shorts of white and Miss Mary McDowell, daughter of Mrs. Ralph DcDowell, played doubles with Burkeley Simmons and two others in a similar costume of blue linen with a blue ribbon bow in her hair. Another who chose blue shorts was Miss Martha Davidge, who wore a tweed coat over her tennis costume as she sat watching the play.

Mrs. Baxter Plays Bridge.

Mrs. Harry Baxter, daughter of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, was playing bridge on the shady veranda of the club. Another bridge playing group included Mrs. Ashmead Fuller, who lives at the club, and Mrs. David Blair.

Among those who remained at the club for luncheon were Mrs. John Kelton, widow of Gen. Kelton, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who had with her her two sons, Norton and MacDonald, just home from Harvard and Syracuse, and Mrs. Arthur Radford, wife of Commander Radford.

Mrs. Radford, author of the book and music for "Daphine's Debut," performed here last spring for the benefit of the National Symphony Orchestra, has just returned from New York, where she sold two movie prologues. A talented singer, she has been asked by a New York producer to submit the book of "Daphine's Debut" to him for possible production on the professional stage. Among the songs she has written is one composed especially for Mrs. Goodwin, who sings in addition to being a painter and etcher. Mrs. Radford leaves today for California to join her husband, who is stationed at Coronado.

Others at the club yesterday included Miss Patricia Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, who entertained several young friends at luncheon, among whom was Miss Sita Finkenstaedt; Mrs. Landra Platt, one of the best women golfers among the members, who came in to lunch after a match; Mr. Thomas Moore, and Miss Bambie McKenna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royal T. McKenna, who was playing golf with MacDonald Goodwin.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Something New Advocated in Lipsticks; Red, With Just a Touch of Yellow.

Posed by Betty Grable.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

THERE is a bright future in store for a new lipstick that has just popped into the market. Women know how flattering Chinese red is to almost every woman. It is red, but it has a little yellow in it and it has a softness of shade that makes it becoming, yet a brilliancy that gives life to almost every complexion. That is what this new lipstick does and I advise you to try one of them.

I haven't seen a woman in years who hasn't needed lipstick whether she used it or not. Many of them cling to the old idea—heaven knows how they manage to do it—that no lady uses makeup. The idea is as dead as the dodo. If you will go into a restaurant and size up the women around you, you will pick one that looks extremely well and you will find out that one of the reasons is that she has applied plenty of lipstick, applied it carefully and selected a shade that matched her complexion.

At another table you will see a woman that looks slightly drab. She may be a smarter woman mentally and in her choice of clothes, but if she were just a little bit smarter, she would use lipstick. The strange thing about it is that the men who say to their own women folks "I don't want you to paint your lips or your cheeks" are the men who spend most of their luncheon hour looking toward another table at a woman who does paint. So I don't think that women should listen too intently to male voices on this subject.

The manufacturer who gets out this lipstick so new, so brilliant and so becoming has a small box with a lipstick and a compact to match neatly tucked inside. Both the top of the lipstick and the top of the rouge box look like carbachon blood-red coral.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post, NAtional 4200, Branch 323.

Skin Diseases Are Spreading At the Beach

Athlete's Foot, Impetigo as Prevalent as Sunburn, Freckles.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

SKIN DISEASES are more prevalent in these days of crowding than they were 25 years ago. Nowhere is this more evident than on a bathing beach in summer. Even sunlight and water will not keep public beaches and public bathhouses free from the danger of infection.

Athlete's foot and impetigo, which were once considered dirt diseases and therefore a disgrace, are nearly as common as freckles and sunburn. Many people do not realize how infectious they are, and are slow in recognizing them.

Thorough Bath Is Help.

A good way to help prevent these skin diseases is to take a thorough bath after sitting or walking barefoot on the beach or in the bathhouse corridors. It seems too bad to wash off the pleasant stickiness of salt water, and it is a nuisance to go through the extra work of scrubbing little Tommy and Sally.

One of the joys of summer at the shore used to be that tub baths every day were unnecessary. Time, energy and hot water were saved. But under modern conditions the present saving may mean extra work and great discomfort in the end. For curing impetigo and athlete's foot usually is a long and painstaking task.

Once a child has contracted one of these skin diseases, the greatest care is needed to keep it from spreading and from being caught by others. It is safest to see a doctor.

Safest to See Doctor.

After exposure to athlete's foot, a good plan is to wash the feet with a mild solution of formaldehyde. This may be followed by an alcohol rub and the use of a powder containing sulphur. If the disease has been contracted, additional precautions to prevent spreading and reinfection include a daily change of socks, which have been boiled, and sponging the inside of shoes with formaldehyde.

Pleasant Homes.

What are you doing for summer pick-up work? If you're looking for something of interest, send for Elizabeth MacRae Boykin's bulletin, "Sew Yourself a Family History." It includes patterns for either cross stitch or needlepoint that you will enjoy copying and adapting to tell your own family story in needlework. It will be sent on receipt of a stamp.

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Elephant Leg.

The late Sir Frederick Treves in his "Elephant Man" describes a pathetic specimen of humanity that he saw in a London sideshow—a man whose entire body had become overgrown with fibrous tissue, the lower limbs "unwieldy, dropsical looking, and grossly misshapen." He relates that he rescued the unfortunate individual from the hands of those who exploited him, preying upon morbid public curiosity.

This was a case of elephantiasis, which is characterized by great enlargement of the lower limbs and other parts of the body, due primarily to blocking of the lymph channels. It is the end result of a progressive process which begins with a mechanical obstruction and terminates in an increase in nonmuscular tissue in and beneath the skin.

Chills, Fever Precede Attack.

The swelling that precedes inflammatory elephantiasis involves repeated attacks of fever with chills, followed by a painful, red, sore limb. Within a few days the patient feels perfectly well, but the edema does not entirely recede. A few months later the acute symptoms may reappear. The whole affair extends over a period of years with marked changes in the nails, excess growth of the outer skin, and perhaps scaling.

As soon as the acute inflammation has subsided treatment consists in baking and massaging the affected limb, which should be elevated. Compression by means of elastic bandages and bacterial vaccines are used. Many cases have recovered under anti-streptococcic serum. If neglected, however, there is progressive growth until a serious handicap to movement is apparent. With each attack there is a new deposit of firm tissue and the skin becomes furrowed and scarred. Great care must be taken not to confuse the situation with phlebitis or inflammation along the course of a vein.

Second Type Harmless.

There is another type of leg edema, not true elephantiasis, that does not have the slightest effect on the individual's general health. It is named after W. F. Milroy, of Nebraska, who first wrote of the disease in 1892. It will usually be discovered that ancestors of the victim exhibited the same symptoms. A sharp line separates the swollen from the normal portion. This may exist at the level of a joint such as the ankle, the knee, or the hip.

While we are in no danger of falling victims to parasitic elephant legs, we should guard against those infections that have a tendency to recur and hence destroy the normal lymph flow. Prompt attention to minor wounds, abrasions, scratches, and skin eruptions will aid us in avoiding serious consequences.

Don't Put Self On the Shelf, Parents Told

Mrs. Wise Believes One Should Find Hobby After Rearing Children.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN A MOTHER has reared her children, should she fold her hands and sit back basking in the reflected glory of their accomplishments? Should she cease to be an individual and become merely an aging and demanding parent, solely concerned with what her sons and daughters are doing and whether they give her the attention she deserves?

"Not if she can find some absorbing interest of her own," says Mrs. Stephen S. Wise, who believes that the mother who tries to live her life over in the lives of her offspring frequently makes both them and herself unhappy and that parents have no right to demand either time or attention from their sons and daughters.

"Our children will find us interesting in proportion to how interesting we make our own lives—quite apart from them," she said yesterday at the Willard Hotel, where she and Dr. Wise stayed during the recent conference of the

Her Forte Is Painting.

But this philosophy is not the chief reason the wife of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and the mother of Magistrate Justine Wise Tulin and Editor-Lecturer James Waterman Wise is also widely known as Louise Waterman Wise, the artist. "I paint because I'd rather do it than anything else in the world," she said. "The two hours I spend before my easel each day pass too quickly. If I could find four hours for my painting it would suit me better."

Painting, however, is only one of Mrs. Wise's absorbing interests. She is chairman of the free synagogue child adoption committee, which she founded 15 years ago, and which, since that time, has found homes for more than 1,600 homeless children. She also founded the women's division of the American Jewish Congress in which she is still an active worker.

Another star in her crown of accomplishments is the Visiting Nurses' Association, which she established a number of years ago when she and Dr. Wise were residents of Portland, Ore. She is still honorary president of that organization—"a position that relieves me of all the work," she said with a smile.

Recently she has been busy on a second large painting of her husband. The first now hangs in a museum in Palestine with her portrait of Judge Julian W. Mack.

Not a Modernist.

She admits she is "not a modernist in any sense," that she favors standards of art as followed by the classicists, and that most impressionistic painters annoy her. "Matisse, for example, pains me because he has turned his genius into the wrong chanels," she said, then added, "yet I find much to please me in the work of Gauguin and Van Gogh, who were individualists rather than impressionists."

Among Mrs. Wise's portraits of famous persons are two of Einstein and one of Dr. Richard Gottheil. She likes to do scenes of factory women at work, of crowds at bargain counters, of girls bending over machines. Landscapes do not interest her, "just portraits, still life and compositions," she commented.

Her two children were grown before she took up art as a career, she said. "I dabbed at it a bit when I was young," she went on, "and then pushed it into the background while I reared my son and daughter and carried on my organization work. But now a grandmother (her daughter, Mrs. Justin Wise Tulin has a boy of 7), Mrs. Wise admits "I couldn't live without my painting."

So when she and Dr. Wise start to Europe on their first lap of the journey that will take them to Geneva for the first World Jewish Congress in August, Mrs. Wise's paint box will be in her traveling bag. "Wherever I go," she said, "it will go with me."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Married Twice, Woman Now Finds Herself in Love With Third Man, Also Married; Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Six years ago I married for the second time. A youthful first marriage, which lasted only a few months, had left me spiritually on the rocks. So, in a mood of complete disillusionment I took for my second husband a much older man of whom my family approved, one who could give me a certain social position and a comfortable amount of this world's goods. I knew at the time I didn't love him (as I understood love) but I had decided by that time that love was pretty much of a snare and a delusion anyhow.

• • • •

My second husband has always been the soul of kindness to me and I learned eventually to care for him a great deal, in a sisterly-daughterly sort of way. And then I met another man. He and his wife were old friends of my second husband's, people I had not known before, and who only came back here to live about a year ago. The wife is some years older than her husband and an invalid. Oddly enough, both of them showed the greatest affection for me from the first, and each, without the other's knowledge, made me a confidant of their secret unhappiness.

• • • •

The man is gay, sociable, witty, endowed with tremendous physical magnetism and energy. He is in his middle thirties. His wife is quiet, studious, indifferent to social life and cares for few persons. I am one of half a dozen persons she cares to have about her. Her husband told me some months ago that underneath his studied solicitude for her welfare, he secretly is wretchedly rebellious against the situation. She has told me that the effort she has made to keep pace with his interests and friendship during the years of her marriage has intensified her invalidism. It is obvious that their marriage is a hollow shell.

Well, here comes the problem: The man is now profoundly in love with me, and I must confess I return his love. He has told me that his future lies in the hollow of my hand: that I can take him and make him, or I can break his heart and lay waste his whole life, which he says lies ahead of him. He is a keen professional man, with every promise of becoming a brilliant figure one day. But he needs a wife who is more his own type and temperament if he is to make the grade.

• • • •

With both of them having made me their mother confessor, as it were, I am desperate to know what to do; what to say. I believe my husband would give me my freedom if I asked for it, and since he is a self-contained man of strong character, I do not feel I would be doing him irreparable hurt in asking for that freedom. We have no children. Neither has the other couple. But the question to be solved is this: Have I the right to say the word, to take the step, which would bring this other woman's household down about her head? And how could I broach the situation to her, supposing you think it not too reprehensible of me to lay claim to this belated chance at happiness which has come my way? Please advise me. I am desperate, agonized . . .

WAITING.

The Gordian Knot.

DEAR WAITING: It seems to me the man you say you love is the one who must take the initiative in cutting the Gordian knot of this situation.

• • • •

I have little faith in the wisdom or value of trickery and deceit. For that reason and since your husband is a man of strong character, capable of great fairness, kindliness, unselfishness and understanding, I advise you to make a clean breast of affairs to him. After all, he is much older than you; it was he who brought you in contact with the other couple; from long years of acquaintanceship with them and their background he probably knows them much better than you do from one short year's association; and it may very well be that he will prove your best friend and wisest adviser in this emotional crisis.

• • • •

As for the other man's wife, it seems to me the only self respecting thing you can do in her direction is to taper off your friendship with her, so that you will not be in a position of hypocritically inviting her confidence in future.

• • • •

Only if both of you are willing to walk unflinchingly through such painful scenes as lie ahead along the path of action I have indicated, only then can it be safely assumed that your love for each other is genuine and deeply rooted. Since this is an emotional conflagration which involves four persons, not alone you and the man you believe you love, you must be prepared to deal honorably and forthrightly with the equasions they represent in the sum total of the situation.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

CHAPTER SIX.

AN HOUR and a half later the splendid limousine which had been found for Ruth Starling by George Dwight was wending its way along the narrow thoroughfares of Soho. The American girl was in a mood to be pleased with everything; so she looked at the narrow old houses, many of them with dirty windows and grimy looking front doors, with a certain excitement as well as interest.

Iris called out to the chauffeur, "You'd better put us down here," and as they left the car, "It's just around the corner," she murmured, and began walking quickly, obviously disliking to find her dainty self among such poor and sordid looking folk as crowded up the narrow pavement.

Suddenly she stopped in front of an open door giving into a dark passage. "Here we are! Try and not touch the walls, for I don't suppose they've been cleaned for a hundred years. But I know the staircase was lately repaired at Mrs. Shipton's own expense."

As they hurried down the passage Ruth looked doubtfully at the flight of stairs, and Iris exclaimed: "The story goes that a famous society woman nearly broke her neck coming down here a fortnight ago! Funnily enough, Mrs. Shipton had just warned her that she was in danger of a bad accident."

Up they went, treading warily on the uneven, dangerous stairs, and Ruth said to herself that it was indeed extraordinary that any woman should care to have her place of business in this indescribably shabby, and even dirty, house. But when they reached the second floor she felt pleasantly surprised, for the boards of the small landing were covered with a piece of new matting, and the old mahogany doors had been beeswaxed, and on the one facing the staircase was printed in white lettering Jane Shipton, Manicure.

Iris knocked, and after a perceptible pause there came a low "Come in." She turned the handle and preceded Ruth into what had evidently been one fairly large, low-ceilinged room, divided now by a matchboard partition. The narrow place contained two chairs and a small table on which was laid out a manicure set.

There followed a pause, then a door set in the further end of the partition was opened for just a few inches, and through the aperture thus made was mumbled: "If you've come to have your hands done, I'm afraid Miss Shipton's out, and won't be back for a long time."

Iris said, smiling, "I've brought you a new client, Mrs. Shipton."

Mrs. Shipton fixed her eyes on the stranger who had come to consult her, and her gaze was clear and piercing. Indeed, faced with that penetrating gaze, Ruth all at once felt a sensation of discomfort, even of fear, sweep over her. Stepping backward, the older woman beckoned, and the other two followed her into a comfortable, well furnished room.

The floor was covered with a large Turkish carpet, and above the fireplace, which was filled with crinkly blue and white paper, hung a large engraving of Queen Victoria, Prince Albert, and their children. Two substantial leather covered armchairs were near one of the windows, and between the chairs stood a narrow, polished mahogany table, on whose center lay a large crystal ball, while to the right of the crystal was a small, heart-shaped, red velvet pad or cushion.

"Now you two ladies won't want to be done together, I take it? Besides, it disturbes me to have anybody looking on. So will one of you wait in the next room? You'll find something nice to read in there."

As she spoke she walked across to a door which obviously led to a back room, and, as she opened it, Ruth saw that the wall was sufficiently thick to allow of a second door which was covered with red baize.

The back room contained some good old furniture, including a small couch under the one window, and a high grandfather chair. On a round mahogany table with scalloped edges lay a number of bound copies of magazines.

"Which of you shall I take first?" asked Mrs. Shipton.

"I'm not going to consult you today. I've only brought my friend," observed Iris. Stepping through into the back room she took up one of the books on the table and settled herself down on the couch.

The fortune teller carefully closed the two doors and motioned the girl to sit down, but she herself remained standing, looking down into Ruth's upturned face.

"Before we start I'd like to tell you something, young lady," she said in a low voice. "I had a sister—dead 30 years ago now—of whom I was mighty fond, and you remind me of her in the strangest way. Yet I couldn't say exactly why, for she was dark, and you are fair. Maybe it's your eyes, or just the way you look. Anyway, I've never seen any one else who made my little Jennie come before me as you do."

Ruth felt touched and a little embarrassed, the more so that Mrs. Shipton's manner, and even her voice, had altered, while she made that pathetic confidence.

Receives Advice.

But it was with her old voice and her old manner that, having sat down, she exclaimed: "Now then, I mustn't waste your time! Have you ever had your fortune told before, may I ask?"

"No," said Ruth frankly. "I've never been to a fortune teller, and I've been very much looking forward to coming here today, for I've heard such wonderful stories about you."

Again the woman's face altered, again her voice altered, as she muttered: "You're the very split of Jennie." She waited a moment before she added: "I trust life holds something really good for you, young lady, for I feel as if you deserved good luck." She was looking searchingly, consideringly, at Ruth Starling, taking in every detail of that perfectly tailored turquoise coat and skirt, soft muslin shirt and becoming black and white hat. She had expected something very, very different from this charming young creature and she wondered how and where Ruth had drifted into the Trefanes' troubled waters.

"Shall I begin by looking at your hand? Just put them gently down on the cushion——" After Mrs. Shipton's new client had obeyed the old woman turned the slender hands around, but she did not look down at either palm and scrutinize the lines that were there as Ruth expected her to do. Instead, she again looked searchingly at the American girl's face as she said quietly: "You have plenty of will power, for all you look so gentle. You've made your own life, spite of opposition, and you've already found out that all isn't gold that glitters." As Ruth smilingly assented, she went on: "But you're in good hands now. You stick to your new friends, and they'll bring you a lot of happiness, to say nothing of what you're longing for—success, nay, I ought to say fame."

"I'm glad you say that!" exclaimed Ruth. In a way it was pleasant to have her own liking for, and belief in, the Trefanes confirmed by this famous fortune teller.

"In this country, at any rate, it's roses, roses, all the way for you, my dear," went on the woman. "No doubt there are people who will try and part you from your friends—but you remain constant to them, and don't be in a hurry to fall in love. That's my advice to you."

How to Read Palms

LIKE TO READ PALMS? Just learn the meaning of the lines and "mounts," or raised pads on the palm! It's easy.

See the Life Line in the sketch? If it forks up near the index finger, numbered 1, that means success through ambition; if it forks down near the Mount of Luna, much travel.

Is that Heart Line very long? Beware of jealousy! Head Line runs straight across the palm? Great prudence. Fate Line branches off toward the third finger? Success in art.

Now for the mounts. Many straight lines across the Mount of Venus, parallel to wrist, show laziness. A small Mount of Luna—realism, coldness, lack of imagination. A star (lines crossing like wheel spokes) on Jupiter means great success. A star on Saturn—drama, disturbance, adventure, danger. A big Mount of Saturn shows a serious nature.

A large Mount of Apollo reveals an easy victim to flattery. A small one, no artistic ability. A small Mount of Mercury shows lack of wit.

Squares, chains, and islands all have their meaning. Perfectly simple to read your palm with the help of our 40-page illustrated booklet, Palmistry and Astrology. Both subjects brightly treated. Clear diagrams, interesting interpretations. Fun for your next party!

Leftists Open Drive in France On Extremists

Both Rightist and Radical 'Enemies of Regime' Are Targets.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 15.—A drive in two directions on "enemies of the regime" was begun tonight by the new Leftist French government, determined not to allow an ebbing strike movement get out of hand.

Police raided offices of a newspaper allegedly owned by Leon Trotsky, exiled Soviet leader. The government charges the paper attempted to turn the strike movement into a revolution.

Indictments against followers of the bolshevik were drafted by a public prosecutor.

Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro, after drafting decrees aimed at "seditious organizations," announced he would ask President Albert Lebrun to sign them at once.

These measures, Salengro asserted, would "bring avowed and non-avowed enemies of the regime to reason."

Through this step, the government will strike both at the Rightist Croix de Feu, semi-fascist organization of World War veterans, and extreme Leftists, if necessary.

Labor conditions were said to be nearing normal again after 21 days of the walkout. Thousands of strikers filed back to work, happy over social reform bills pushed through the chamber of deputies last week by Premier Blum.

The ministry of the interior announced 265,000 strikers had returned to work in the eight departments most affected by the strike.

In Paris and suburbs, 202,000 were back, with 76,000 still out in the capital district. The latter figure included 32,000 department store workers.

The Senate will take up consideration of the labor bills tomorrow. They provide a 40-hour week, higher pay, paid vacations and the right of collective bargaining.

The cabinet studied the application of a decree which would authorize the dissolving of Rightest leagues, including the Croix de Feu.

Members of Trotsky's organization were accused of urging strikers to seize control of factories immediately in disregard of the general federation of labor agreement with employers.

Couzens Will Enter Michigan Primary

By the Associated Press.

Senator James Couzens, of Michigan last night announced his candidacy for Senatorial nomination in the Republican primaries in that State.

In a statement, he said:

"I am entering my name as a candidate for nomination in the Republican primaries. I am a Republican. As a member of the Senate I have considered each issue on its merits and that will continue to be my course if I am re-elected.

"I intend to run for nomination and re-election on my record and leave it to the judgment of my constituents as to the desirability of sending me back to the Senate."

Col. Evans to Get Medal Today For Seaplane Stunt Flight in '17

Lieut. Col. Francis T. Evans, commanding officer of the Washington Marine Barracks, will receive the Distinguished Flying Cross at the close of the daily Marine review at the barracks, Eighth and I streets southeast, at 5 p. m. today.

The medal, which is being given him for his flight in 1917 in which he was the first aviator to turn a loop-the-loop in a seaplane, will be presented by Representative Melvin J. Maas.

Fifty years old, Col. Evans is the oldest Marine aviator from the point of service. He qualified as a naval aviator at Pensacola, Fla., in 1916. It was the following year, while stationed at Pensacola as an instructor in flight training, that he made the stunt flight in the seaplane.

In the Marine service since 1909, he has served in Guam, Honolulu, China and Haiti. During the war he was in command of the Marine aviation squadron at the Azores.

Until last year, when he was relieved, he had been flying continuously. His last station before coming to the Navy Yard was with the air force at Quantico.

LIEUT. COL. FRANCIS T. EVANS.

Inquiry Is Begun Into 'Murder Ring'

Springfield, Mass., June 15 (U.P.).—Investigation of a suspected wholesale insurance murder ring, operating in the Connecticut Valley, moved forward tonight under impetus of an order that the body of Frank Halgas, Lodlow millhand, be exhumed.

It was a routine inquest into Halgas' death that disclosed possible existence of a sinister racket which may be responsible for 50 or more deaths in this area over a period of years.

Known to have carried at least $8,000 insurance, Halgas was believed fatally injured by an automobile April 4 until trial Judge George B. Haas ruled poison in "deadly quantities" was found in the mill worker's body. Exhumation, ordered by District Attorney Thomas F. Moriarty, probably will be made tomorrow at Indian Orchard Cemetery.

As result of the Halgas inquest, Judge Haas urged a "sweeping" investigation of scores of suspicious deaths in ten Connecticut Valley towns. The recommended inquiry embraces deaths from heart disease and accident during the past 15 years of insured persons in Ludlow, Chicopee, Indian Orchard, Northampton, Deerfield, Hadley, Easthampton, Westhampton, Amherst and Wilbraham.

Meanwhile, State detectives, insurance company investigators and local police joined Moriarty in a quest for evidence.

Man Jailed in N. Y. For Morgan Threat

New York, June 15 (A.P.).—Detectives and postoffice inspectors jailed Gregor Aharon, 52, late today on a charge of sending threatening letters to J. P. Morgan, Edsel Ford and others.

Aharon, Turkish-born Armenian, has been a dealer in antiques in this country since 1908.

The complaint said he offered Morgan a statue he asserted was modeled by Michael Angelo, and demanded $1,000,000 for it.

John Brunner, 69, Dies; Metallurgist

Chicago, June 15 (A.P.).—John Brunner, 69, noted engineer and metallurgist who won several awards for his research into the production of steel rails, died today in his suburban Evanston home.

A native of Sweden and a graduate of the Royal Institute of Technology in Stockholm in 1887, Brunner was decorated in 1919 with Sweden's Royal Order of the Nordstjernan.

The American Society of Swedish Engineers gave him its John Ericsson medal last February for improvements he had fostered in the treatment of rails with heat.

Since 1902, Brunner was associated with the Illinois Steel Co.

From 1890 to 1896 he was an engineer for the Carnegie Steel Co. at Pittsburgh. Later he was a city bridge engineer in Pittsburgh, and from 1899 to 1902 head of the Bureau of Engineering and Construction in Pittsburgh.

Brunner is survived by his wife, Mrs. Cora Mitchell Brunner. Funeral services are to be held Wednesday.

Roosevelt Son Seen In Congress Race

Boston, June 15 (U.P.). — James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, had "no comment at all" on a published report he would be a Congressional candidate from the Ninth Massachusetts District.

The report said young Roosevelt, a personal friend of former Mayor Richad M. Russell of Cambridge, who now occupies the Congressional seat, had the quiet backing of several party leaders.

Though absent from Massachusetts much of the time recently, young Roosevelt maintains his legal residence at the Brookline home of his father-in-law, Dr. Harvez Cushing, famed brain surgeon.

British Cabinet Acts Tomorrow On Sanctions

Committee Reported in Conditional Agreement to End Boycott.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 15.—The cabinet foreign affairs committee, meeting tonight, was reported to have agreed in principle to the lifting of sanctions against Italy—provided the League of Nations so decides.

The recommendations, it was understood, were based on the failure of existing sanctions to stop Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, and on the necessity of Italian representation at conferences dealing with the Turkish request for refortification of the Dardanelles.

Members of the cabinet, at a full meeting Wednesday, are expected to finally decide the British attitude.

Eden's Removal Demanded.

Today the Rothemere papers, which are urging that sanctions be abandoned, demanded that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden be removed from office as "an arch blunderer."

The Evening Star, asserting Westminister was "buzzing" with rumors of a cabinet crisis, saw Eden on one side and Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, on the other.

Chamberlain, in a recent speech, called continuation of sanctions "the very midsummer of madness."

At a crowded meeting of the British and Italian council for peace and friendship, it was decided to send a message of good will to Premier Mussolini, of Italy. A resolution was passed also urging the government to abolish sanctions.

Bitter Fight Forecast.

Simultaneously, a meeting of 2,400 members of a woman's peace crusade, which was addressed by Princess Tsahay, daughter of the exiled Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie, gave evidence that a bitter fight was likely to be waged among the British people on the sanctions issue.

The crusaders enthusiastically voted a resolution demanding the suspension of Italy from the League, and an unabated continuance of economic and financial pressure against Italy unless Premier Mussolini accepts a Geneva settlement.

The large group of women lustily cheered Princess Tsahay.

MacDonald Makes Plea.

Cardiff, Wales, June 15 (A.P.).—A strong plea for putting teeth in sanctions machinery of the League of Nations was made today by Ramsay MacDonald, who openly aligned himself with the pro-sanctions bloc of the British cabinet.

In a speech to the thirty-first International Peace Conference, the former premier, now lord president of the council, assumed the leadership of cabinet opposition to the stand taken by Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer.

Hitting at detractors of the League in a counter-attack on the hue and cry raised by some sections of the press for the resignation of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and withdrawal of Great Britain from Geneva, MacDonald said:

"Stand by the League! If we are going to have peace in this world it must be peace formed by a combination of the nations of the world.

"The League must tackle the problem of the aggressor. The Kellegg Pact did not prove adequate and we must consider the idea embodied in Article XVI of the League Covenant (dealing with sanctions) • • • We must see that the aggressor does not step in and smash to smithereens the fabric of peace that has been set up."

Clan Tried to Kill Editor, Court Told

Detroit, June 15 (A.P.). — Dayton Dean testified today that N. Ray Markland, former mayor of nearby Highland Park, complained repeatedly that he would be ruined politically unless Dean and other Black Legion gunmen succeeded in their persistent efforts to kill the fighting editor of the community newspaper.

Markland is one of 12 men charged with conspiracy to murder Arthur F. Kingsley, the editor, whose newspaper helped defeat him for re-election in 1934.

Dean, the Black Legion's confessed "executioner" in the slaying of Charles A. Poole, calmly told a packed courtroom at the examination of 11 of the 12 defendants today of signing in blood an oath with other members to carry out the plot.

"We were told there would be three other men who would see that if we didn't do the job we would be taken care of ourselves," Dean testified. Several attempts to kill Kingsley failed, and the editor once outdistanced the "death squad" in a wild night automobile chase before Markland was defeated in the election and the death plot was dropped, Dean testified.

2 New Cardinals Elevated by Pope

Vatican City, June 15 (A.P.).—Pope Pius XI, creating two new cardinals, spoke thoughtfully today of his duties "as long as life lasts."

At a secret consistory he elevated two bookish friends, Mgrs. Giovanni Merosti and Eugenio Tisserant.

Then, speaking to 27 assembled cardinals, he said:

"We invite the Catholic faithful to pray that the Lord permit us, as long as life lasts, to spend it in unceasing, fruitful work for the divine glory and good of the soul."

(The Pope, now entering his eightieth year, has been reported in somewhat delicate health.)

His holiness also bespoke his satisfaction with the lay activities of the Catholic action groups, "in the face of an increase in the church's enemies."

Medieval color and ritual marked the secret consistory.

More Nazi Rioting Feared by Danzig

Free City of Danzig, June 15 (A.P.). Amid new reports of Nazi bloodshed, Dr. Arthur Greiser, president of Danzig's Nazi-controlled senate, warned High Commissioner Sean Lester tonight that tension was getting dangerous.

Apprehension was felt for Wednesday, when Storm Trooper Guenther Deskowski, killed in a meeting house brawl Friday, will be buried. A Danzig Storm Troop division was named for him today.

Reports of other disturbances filtered in. At Meisterwalde Saturday night a Schutz Staffel man, Ernst Ludwig, was shot to death and another member of the same formation, Paul Pressonke, was wounded. Two Socialist brothers named celler were arrested for the shootings.

An inquiry into the brawl in which Deskowski was killed and 50 persons wounded at a meeting of political factions resulted in the verdict that neither side was entirely to blame.

cluded with an explanation that he was merely taking care of his two name in their law firm. He insisted he gets no revnue from the partnership.

"I am doing what any father would do under the circumstances," he said, "and I'm sure that if the gentlewoman were a father she would do the same thing."

The debate was marked by fresons by permitting them to use his quent clashes between Blanton and scattered friends of the District. At one time Representative Focht (Republican), of Pennsylvania, a former chairman of the House District Committee, and the sub-committee chairman shouted epithets and belittling remarks at each other, but the House was in such an uproar they could not be understood.

Mrs. Norton was roundly applauded as she continued to assail Blanton after he had declined to yield her further time and while he pleaded vainly with the Speaker to force her to sit down.

The District Committee chairman also came to the defense of the District in the lump sum battle but to no avail. She vainly called attention to the unrepealed 60-40 law, the voteless condition of District residents, and to the President's indorsement of the $5,700,000 Federal contribution.

At one time during the debate Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, author of the bill to repeal the "red rider," asked Blanton if it were true that he had told his constituents in a campaign that if he were re-elected he would put through a law requiring members of Congress to report at work at 9 a. m.

At another time Blanton, in explaining why he had rejected offers to lecture, stated that he was afraid to leave Washington for fear that Mrs. Norton might "have pulled off something in my absence, like the Sisson bill."

She assailed Blanton for "constituting himself a committee of one" against all District residents and charged that he conducts appropriation sub-committee hearings in such a fashion that witnesses aren't allowed to explain their needs.

"The people of the District tell me," she said, "that they wouldn't object to an increase in taxation if they were allowed to spend their own money the way they see fit."

Blanton, in reply, asserted that the President, under the Constitution, has no part in the control of the District of Columbia and has authority to recommend a budget merely by leave of Congress. His authority to appoint the District Commissioners, the Texan said, was granted him by Congress.

The compromise lump-sum proposal was adopted by a division vote of 101 to 34 and a roll call vote of 219 to 86.

Among the amendments upon which Blanton prevailed over Mrs. Norton's objections is one which will force the corporation counsel's office to dismiss two assistants, one of them a former aid to the District Committee.

Aiding Blanton in all of his arguments yesterday was Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, Democrat, of Indiana.

Although a member of the District Committee, Mrs. Jenckes joined Blanton's forces in upholding the "red rider" and has been at odds with Mrs. Norton and other members of the District Committee for months.

In most of the amendments in which the House offers to recede the bill would be restored merely to the Budget Bureau recommendations. These recessions insure budget appropriations for public health and welfare institutions, save the salaries of administrators.

The House conferees obtained instructions to insist upon the following:

A cut in the item for smoke control; elimination of funds to pay two assistants corporation counsel recently hired; $1,000 instead of $2,000 for traveling expenses of District employes; a reduction in the public library appropriation; elimination of paving of portions of Runnymede place; $350,000 instead of $450,000 as the new Chain Bridge authorization; cut in gas tax fund for street improvements.

Reductions in appropriations for sewer, playground and community center departments; slash in fund for transporting crippled and ill school children; $150,000 for school additions and extensions; $165,000 addition to Alice Deal Junior High School; $83,000 for stadium at Wilson High School.

Cut in item for school buildings and grounds, reduction in health department salaries, a ban against appointment of a marshal in District Court of Apepals, reduction in salaries of welfare department, elimination of a provision to admit pay patients at Children's Tuberculosis Hospital, cut in salaries of District relief officials, deletion of $5,000 for National Library for the Blind.

The House conferees also were instructed to resist all of the amendments added by the Senate to give the District Commissioners broader authority to solve traffic problems. One of these provides for the setting up of park-o-meters in the Capital.

House, Senate Vote 4 Civil Service Bills

Both Chambers Adopt Measure for Hoover Aids' Retirement.

Black Proposal to Bar Political Influence in Promotion Approved.

Four bills relating to civil service were passed by one or both houses of Congress yesterday as Democrats moved to get ahead of the Republicans in supporting the merit system. The legislative moves were:

Both the Senate and the House passed identical measures extending the retirement privilege to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and his aids.

The Senate passed the long-dormant Black bill to prevent political influence in promotions of Governmental employes and sent it to the House.

A 40-hour week was extended to 3,423 Federal workers in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing by a bill passed in the House. It had previously been adopted by the Senate.

The House passed another bill which should give employes retired under the civil service act the right to select one of several types of annuities.

Two New Jersey Republicans blocked the attempt of Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, to authorize the President to extend the civil service system to all executive departments of the Federal Government.

"The Republicans put a civil service plank in their platform," he said. "I don't see how they could object to this bill."

Feared Too Broad.

Nevertheless, Representative Lehlbach, a former Civil Service Committee chairman, and McLean, New Jersey Republicans, objected. McLean expressed a fear that it might be broadly interpreted so as to apply to all Delaware corporations because of a provision which included incorporated agencies.

Before the House passed the bill to extend the retirement privilege to the director, assistant directors, inspectors and special agents of the Bureau of Investigation, Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, spoke briefly in defense of Hoover.

Declaring there had been a "silent whispering campaign" conducted against the chief of the G-men, McCormack lauded him for his "wonderful work in combatting organized crime," and said that criticism directed against him does not reflect the attitude of Congress.

McCormack ndicated that the criticism was that Hoover took credit for achievements of his agents. He retorted that Hoover is quick to turn praise to his aids.

Provisions Extended.

The 40-hour week bill for the Bureau of Engraving and Printing is intended to extend a provision of the 1935 independent offices appropriation act, which placed 780 mechanics of the bureau on a 40-hour week while the other 3,423 were left on a 44-hour week.

The 1935 act, Ramspeck said, has brought a difficult situation and a stagger hour system for the mechanical trade workers.

The bill to permit retiring civil service workers to elect one of several types of pensions sets up an elaborate system.

The annuity may be paid in one of four ways. It may be increased with the provision that no unexpended part shall be payable after the annuitant's death; it may be paid under a joint and survivorship annuity or a modified form of the same arrangement; or it may be paid on basis of a yearly pension and additional death insurance.

The Senate passed the Black civil service bill, which had been gathering dust for months, 48 to 18, with a minor amendment. It now goes to the House.

It puts the responsibility upon Government employes of not using political influence to obtain promotions in the executive departments.

Sponsored by Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, the bill requires Government employes, when receiving a promotion, to file a sworn statement with the Governmental agency which employs them, stating that they have not solicited aid from any member of the Senate, House, political committee, or any other political organization.

Upon a suggestion of Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, Senator Black accepted an amendment inserting a chairman or member of a political committee.

Government employes who are found guilty of making false affidavits are subject to suspension for six months for the first offense and dismissal upon a second conviction.

A much broader bill, the La-Follette-O'Mahoney measure, aims at eliminating both political and personal influence in obtaining jobs or promotions for Government employes. It was introduced just prior to the Republican Convention.

Union A.F.G.E. Delegate Fight Ends in a Draw

Resolution Is Tabled After Debate; Press Release Curb Is Voted.

The bitter fught battle between the Central Labor Union and the American Federation of Government Employes over representation to the central body ended last night in a draw.

The fight began two weeks ago when the executive committee of the C. L. U. submitted a report recommending that delegates representing Government employes be named by the A. F. G. E. District Department on a basis of group membership.

The Government employes, especially the alphabetical lodges, conducted a strenuous campaign to defeat the resolution. After debate, last night a motion made by Lewis Tuckman, of the carpenters union, to table the motion was passed.

Press Releases.

Coincidental with the fight was a resolution adopted just after the representation debate. It was a motion to confine all press releases involving the Central Labor Union to the press committee before making them public.

The resolution, it was explained, would prohibit members of lodges releasing news concerning the C. L. U., and was believed brought about by the A. F. G. E.-C. L. U. fight, in which the Governmental agencies have aired their grievances in the press.

David Kaplan, representative of the Mechanics International, told members of the central body he was prepared to carry on a long campaign against repair shops now holding out.

Board of Strategy.

He said he was prepared to ask the executive committee of the C. L. U. to act as a board of strategy. Kaplan charged the garages were importing nonunion labor from Baltimore and Greensboro, N. C., and made a plea for volunteers to walk picket lines at night. Three hundred and fifty men have walked out in 19 shops, he said. Eleven shops have signed union agreements.

Anna Neery, State of Maryland organizer for the clothers' union, made a plea to Washington women of the C. L. U., asking them not to buy cloaks now being sold here. The cloaks and other women's articles are made by a Baltimore firm now involved in a clothing strike there, she said.

'Timmie' Goes to Cat Heaven As Distinguished Pals Mourn

Press Club Feline, Once Subject of Portrait by Howard Chandler Christie, and Friend of Waldorf Chef, Passes Away Quietly.

"Timmie," the Press Club cat, who hob-nobbed with the Nation's great and was of sufficient importance to become the subject of a portrait by Howard Chandler Christy, is dead.

His end came quietly at the home of his master, Bascom N. Timmons, newspaper correspondent, at 1028 Connecticut avenue.

Old age and perhaps a touch of too much fine living caused Timmie's death. He would have been 9 years old on his next birthday, and doubtless his friend Oscar, the famous chef at the old Waldorf Hotel, would have baked him another birthday cake.

Timmie was a self-made cat. Mr. and Mrs. Timmons found him in the gutter when he was a helpless, undistinguished kitten mewing for milk and affection. They adopted him and he grew into a great black-and-white feline, fond of politics, newspapermen, actors, artists and telephones.

"Dress Suit Cat," Walter Huston, the artist, once dubbed "Timmie" because of the black and white coloring of his throat and neck.

For years Timmie was a familiar figure at the National Press Club. He arched his back and his bright eyes gleamed with rare intelligence. He followed Timmons around more in the manner of a blooded dog than a cat, and as he grew to maturity he learned to listen at the telephone receiver when Timmons talked.

Like the dog in the phonograph advertisement of years ago, Timmie knew his master's voice.

Timmie never "went Hollywood," despite the fact that he had offers to go into the movies.

Only recently Christy, struck by the sleek grace of Timmie, painted his picture, the only animal portrait he ever has done.

Timmie was fond of the radio, but during the 1928 campaign the only speaker to whom he would listen was Al Smith.

Not long ago, when Timmons was swinging through the Southwest with the President, he called long-distance from Dallas. Timmie was brought to the phone. He seemed delighted and knew his master was thinking of him far away.

Oscar, of the Waldorf, was fond of Timmie, and baked him a birthday cake several years ago.

Timmie's mourners, however, are not limited to his distinguished cronies.

He was fond of birds. He learned to love them first when Mrs. Timmons had a pet canary, Caruso, given her by Mrs. Coolidge. Subsequently he became attached to a robin, a baby chick and two young ducklings.

Plans for Timmie's funeral had not been completed last night.

Roads to Skirt Zoo Are Sought In Hazen Plan

Program Would Include Widening of Parkway in Rock Creek Area.

Widening beneath the Massachusetts avenue bridge of the roadway of the Potomac-Rock Creek parkway and construction of roads around the National Zoological Park were proposed yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

As now constructed the parkway permits traveling several miles with few cross streets intersecting. At night, however, the zoo park is closed. This makes it necessary for persons driving through the park to leave the park to go around the Zoo. Hazen would connect the northern and southern parks of the park, bordering the Zoo, by new roads, which would run around the eastern edge of the zoo.

A metal roadway might be built over Rock Creek at Massachusetts avenue to widen the drive, Hazen said. The drive narrows at that point and permits only two lanes of traffic. It could be widened to provide for four or six lanes of traffic, he said.

Remodelling of the connection of the parkway drive at K street, also should be undertaken the Commissioner said. His ideas are to be submitted to his colleagues and to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, he said.

Proud

But Modest Is Mother of Honor Scholars.

Like most mothers, Mrs. Clarence Wright, of 4620 Thirtieth street northwest, is proud of her children's achievements. But, unlike most, she believes that they inherit their good qualities from their father.

Two of Mrs. Wright's sons, Richard, 18, and Clarence, 17, are in the graduating class of Western High School. And both have won scholarships—Richard, The Post's scholarship to Georgetown Foreign Service School, and Clarence a scholarship to the Bulliss School at Silver Spring, Md. Clarenpe is preparing for Annapolis.

Mrs. Wright, who is a lawyer, has a nice sense of justice.

"The children must get their brains from their father," she says. "He's a scientist, you know, and he graduated first in his class at Clark University."

'Scrip' Plan For D. C. Idle Held Doomed

Objection by Rep. Taber Blocks Passage of Bill in House.

Mrs. Greenway Expected To Make New Effort on Behalf of Plea.

The Greenway plan to end Federal relief and unemployment in the same stroke appeared doomed last night for the current session of Congress as an objetcion was raised to it on the House consent ealendar.

The objection which blocked passage last night came from Representative Taber (Republican), of New York.

Another Move Likely.

Representative Greenway (Democrat), of Arizona, in the chamber at the time, made no attempt to defend the measure, although she had been assured of substantial support. It is expected she will make another move to get a House vote before adjournment, but almost any recourse now will require unanimous consent.

The joint resolution authorizes the District Commissioners to inaugurate the system of issuing "anticipatory revenue certificates" of $1 value as soon as substantial support is tssured from local employers.

All Could Be Absorbed.

Under the plan, which Mrs. Greenway hopes to extend on a national scale after an experimetnal period in the National Capital, all idle workers would be absorbed by private industry and paid in these certificates.

These certificates would be financed by a weekly 2-cent stamp tax, which would be applied by the holder each week for 56 weeks. At the end of this time the District government would redeem the certificate for $1 and keep the 6 cents for expenses.

Roll On

To Philadelphia, Say Wheel Barrow Bettors.

C. E. Landrum, 193-pound engineer of Shreveport, La., and W. E. Bussey, who pulled him here on an election bet from their home city, 1,329 miles away, weer at large in Washington last night, bu the wheel barrow in which the trip was made was being held at the Third Precinct station.

However, the pair of Democrats who wagered on a State election, will get their vehicle today. Police said they had called at headquarters when they missed it, and asked that it be kept all night while they found a place to rest their weary bones.

The wheel barrow was picked up on the sidewalk in front of the White House while they were trying to arrange an interview with the President. They hope to see Mr. Roosevelt today.

Bussey, a 139-pound truck gardener, wheeled Landrum, winner of the bet made two months ago, in from Falls Church yesterday on the last leg of the trip.

The pair hope to get on to the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, taking turns at wheeling now that the bet is paid.

They'll go back to Louisiana vit the wheel barrow route, too.

A Man Whose Work Is Never Done

Joseph Burke, window washer at the Department of Agriculture, who every morning of his life has 1,800 unwashed panes ahead of him.

Wash a While, or Rest a While, He Has 1,800 Windows to Clean

Joseph Burke, Pane Masseur of Agriculture's 9,000 Frames, Finds Stunt a Species of Perpetual Motion Similar to Squirrel in Cage.

Joseph Burke scrubbed the 142d window, left side, second floor, of the Department of Agriculture Building until it sent a sheen of diamond glitters through the air.

But when he got through giving that window a shower bath and a rub down he still had 1,800 more to wash.

Yesterday, he had 1,800 windows to bathe.

And tomorrow and every tomorrow to come he still will have 1,800 windows to clean.

It never ends.

Perpetual Motion.

It's a form of perpetual motion that will las as long as Burke keeps his job as one of the five window washers for the Department of Agriculture.

It's a labyrinth he never will get out of. It's like the squirrel in the cage—you know the squirrel that trips around a hoop, and the hoop spins faster and faster, and the faster the squirrel's legs work like pistons on whirls? But the squirrel never rell's legs go the faster the hoop gets anywhere.

Neither does Burke. Always he has 1,800 windows to face.

Working with him are other window masseurs, as adept at the art of cleaning windows as any beautician who ever smeared cold cream on a lady's face.

9,000 Windows.

Nine thousand windows give light and air to the Department of Agriculture. And to give light they must be clean. And to be clean they must be washed four times a year.

Burke has a "beat" of 1,800. When he gets through there are 1,800 more.

Burke doesn't like to talk shop, because he's still got 1,800 to talk about.

And he doesn't try to catch up with his work on his days off, because he can't.

He's still got 1,800.

Monarch Clubs Open Two-Day Sessions Here

Charles F. Phillips, Lawyer From Philadelphia, Is Speaker.

Representatives of Monarch clubs from eight States where the organization has associations will close their annual two-day session here tomorrow.

The convention opened yesterday at the Willard Hotel with a morning business session at which annual reports were made and the annual address of Charles F. Phillips, Philadelphia lawyer, was heard.

Dedicated to service to society and youth, Monarch clubs have been organized along the East Coast until the association now has 700 members. It was organized in 1934 in Washington.

Various clubs—there are 21 along the eastenr coast—have helped place children over orphanage age, in business and in jobs.

Last night the clubs observed Monarch Night with music and dancing and entertainment. Features of today's sessions will be a luncheon at 1 o'clock and the club's annual banquet and ball. Both will be held at the Willard.

Needy in D.C. Will Cultivate WPA Gardens

Project Realized After Long Campaign by Civic Leaders.

Plots Will Be Located in Benning Flats and on First Street.

A successful conclusion to the months-old campaign for a WPA garden project which would enable needy families to raise their own vegetables was announced yesterday by J. A. Nolan, of the Council of Social Agencies.

The secretary of the council's family committee revealed that the District office of WPA has agreed to furnish manpower and tools to plow two tracts, one for colored and one for white families. The former, located on the Benning flats, will accomodate 150 gardens, while the other, on First street southwest between M and N streets, will accommodate 100.

The Council of Social Agencies will supervise the work and, from a long waiting list, supply the names of impoverished husbands and fathers who will cultivate the gardens in exchange for the privilege of keeping the produce.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, chairman of the council's garden committee, and other civic leaders led the fight for establishment of a WPA garden project here. The favorable result brings to four the total of subsistence gardens under supervision of the social group.

A plot for colored near First and T streets southwest is making good progress with its 100 gardens, said Nolan, and 160 more in the Benning flats are being tilled by white workers.

Work on the two new tracts made possible by WPA funds began yesterday, Nolan declared. The gardens will be used to raise autumn vegetables.

Guilty Plea Brings Refine for Speeder

Robert F. McDermott yesterday was sentenced to pay a $25 fine or spend 25 days in jail when he pleaded guilty before Judge Isaac R. Hitt in Traffic Court on a charge of speeding. McDermott had been given a suspended sentence on a $500 fine at Rockville, imposed for operating his car at 75 miles an hour in a chase which extended over the District line.

McDermott complained he was placed in double jeopardy in view of the Rockville sentence, but Judge Hitt held the local court could not take coginzance of the Maryland action, as a separate offense was committed in the District.

Policeman Harold E. Johnson, of the Sixth Precinct, testified he and a fellow officer chased McDermott in a scout car on Sixteenth street at a speed greater than 75 miles an hour and that McDermott escapeld over the District line. He was arrested shortly afterward in Maryland.

McDermott lives in the 6600 block Eastern avenue northwest.

Noted Writers Will Pen Plays For RKO-Radio

Authors and Adapters for 1936-37 Include Many of First Flight.

Names which have made literary history will be joined with those of foremost contemporary authors on the 1936-37 program of RKO-Radio's feature pictures.

Works of such masters as the late Rudyard Kipling, Britain's poet of empire; Sir James M. Barrie and Alexandre Dumas will share places on the new program with adaptations of popular novels and Broadway hits and with screen originals keyed to the tempo of tomorrow's headlines. Preparing the material for filming are more than a score of recognized leaders of the writing craft.

Included in this array of literary talent are Dudley Nichols, academy award winner; Allan Scott, playwright and author of recent Astaire-Rogers film hits; Jane Murfin, producer, scenarist and original story writer; Irwin Shaw and Vivian Cosby, noted New York playwrights, and Ferdinand Reyher, journalist, novelist and screen author.

Others prominent on the studio staff are Rian James, Anthony Veiller, John Twist, Thyra Samter Winslow, Lieut. Comdr. Frank Wead, Thomas Lennon, Dorothy Yost, Philip G. Epstein, S. K. Lauren, Mortimer Offner, Gertrude Purcell and the recently signed New York feature writer and columnist, Paul Yawitz.

Prize Play Included.

Other noted contributors to the new program will be Maxweil Anderson, Matthew Josephson, Francis Wallace and George Kelly. Anderson's sensational stage hit, "Winterset," winner of the New York drama critics circle award, and Josephson's novel, "Robber Barons," are scheduled as outstanding film features. Kelly's play, "Behold The Bridegroom" and Wallace's novel, "The Big Game," are also to be brought to the screen.

Kipling's genius will be represented by a picture inspired by "Gunga Din," perhaps the most famous of his poems.

Sir James M. Barrie's "Quality Street" will serve as a Katharine Hepburn starring vehicle.

Dumas' novel, "Son of Monte Cristo," will be adapted as one of the more important 1936-37 features.

Of the studio staff writers, Dudley Nichols forged to undisputed leadership in his field last year with his adaptation of "The Informer," an achievement which won him the highest award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. "The Lost Patrol" and "Mary of Scotland" are two of Nichols' many outstanding screen plays.

Allan Scott, whose stage plays include "Goodbye Again" and "The Piper's Song," has to his credit such screen vehicles as "Roberta," "Top Hat," "In Person" and "Follow the Fleet," among others.

Long one of the screen's foremost creative artists, Jane Murfin will return to RKO-Radio, scene of many of her past successes, to adapt her own original story, "Street Girl," as a starring vehicle for Lily Pons.

"Bury the Dead" Author Signed.

Irwin Shaw, one of the studio's new contract writers, is the author of "Bury the Dead," perhaps the most discussed and critically acclaimed Broadway stage play of the year. Also a recent addition to the RKO-Radio contract roster, Vivian Cosby has a distinguished record of stage successes, including the plays "Trick for Trick," "Queen at Home" and "The Comedy Strip," and the musicals "Cynthia," "Miss Happiness," "High Hat Review" and "Hoopla."

Ferdinand Reyher, author of the original story for "Don't Turn 'Em Loose," has numerous screen plays to his credit, including "Stranded," "Rendezvous at Midnight" and "Fugitive Lovers.'

One of the most prolific, as well as successful, writers, Rian James has received credit for more than 20 film vehicles during the past five years. Anthony Veiller has scored with such hits as the recent "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford" and "Star of Midnight," among other screen plays.

"Alice Adams" and "The Gay Divorcee" are among the many fine screen plays on which Dorothy Yost has received writing credit. To the record of Lieut. Comndr. Frank Wead is listed a long array of hits extending from "Dirigible" and including the more recent productions, "Ceiling Zero" and "The Great Impersonation."

All Moods Embraced.

Thomas Lennon, author of the novel "The Laughing Journey," and the screen original, "Grand Jury," has collaborated on the screen plays for "Silly Billies," "Murder on A Bridle Path" and "Special Investigator."

"Dancing Lady," "Reckless," "Mad Love" and "Rendezvous" are among the numerous screen plays credited to P. J. Wolfson, who also collaborated with Philip G. Epstein in writing "Love On A Bet." John Twist, an RKO-Radio veteran, did the screen play for the recent "The Last Outlaw" and received credit for "Annie Oakley," among other successes.

About the Showshops

AND you meet such interesting people.

For instance, ankling back to the tesselated luxury of the drayma department from former Boxing Commissioner Buchholz's boxlunchery on make-up night—newspaper, not romantic—you hear a familiar voice intone, "Oh, them bells" and turn around to find old Herb Williams, the Baron of Bayside, or wherever it is on Long Island, en route from a tenderloin steak and a flagon of wassail to the stage entrance of Loew's Fox. That's right up my alley, so picking my way gingerly among the defunct cantaloupe rinds and decapitated beer bottles, I learn that with "At Home Abroad" only three weeks closed, Herb already has done two weeks in vaudeville. "That," says he, "is the advantage of being a vaudeville actor. There isn't much 'time' left, but there's enough to bridge the gap between stage productions and pictures. That makes it nice." Sure does. That tricky young woman in Herb's act is his daughter, Doris Ewing, whose mother was Hilda Wolfus, half of the original act of Williams and Wolfus, a standard laugh-maker for years on the big time. You won't hear Herb yell "spotli-i-i-ght!" in private life, so you will have to identify him by his spiffy light suits and black felt hat, snapped down on the side over the right ear. He'll probably be with the legation set.

BELL.

At the stage entrance whom do you bump into—and that's being almost unnecessarily grammatical about it—but Yascha Bunchuk, whose symphony of 60 pieces is wowing the customers at the Fox even more this week than it did last. Yascha is done up in white, all air-cooled and everything, and says nice things about some nice things that were said—if you get the idea.

Next day on the tramcar, Max Zinder goes overboard on the topic of the big orchestra in the motion picture theater—an item for which we also are a sucker—and promises some more string quartet chamber music as soon as Mrs. Zinder gets the sandwiches made!

On E street you have to fight your way through National and Earle Theater folks From Guy Wonders, of the Warner outfit, you get the crack about Sid Lust's program sign out in Rockville that appeared here yesterday and from "Dutch", the National's head Patsy, the tip that Panjandrum Steve Cochran has moved all his office desks over to the Hay-Adams House, rather than dig in for the summer in the end of the backstage coal chute that has been boarded up for his use, next to the alley stairway on the bottom step of which Bess Schreiner has pitched the office of the American Theater Society. It comes out, too, that the weary Panjandrum is suffering a return of his old galloping colic and is contemplating a few days of hospitalization to get back on his feet, the while plans for his new summer theater at Darby Farm are held in abeyance—meaning that it won't be open by July 13, except by a miracle. Stoo bad.

• • • •

And then the postman rings twice.

It must be the boys are right about that business of Time's marching on. Here is an envelope containing an invitation to the graduation of Leonard Meakin, son of the manager of RKO-Keith's, from Western High School this week, and another to the wedding reception of Ethel Mae Breeskin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Breeskin and sister of "Barnee," of the Shoreham, a week from Sunday. I seem to recall a day when Leonard's dad was playing juveniles with the old Poli Stock Company, back about 1911, and Leonard was not yet even a gleam in his pappy's eye, and another, a little later, when Dan Breeskin was Washington's foremost motion picture theater orchestra conductor and both Ethel and Barney Breeskin were little tots no bigger than this!

This note is one of superfluous thanks from Flora McGill Keefer, one of the Capital's most brilliant concert artistes, and this one a similarly cordial line or two from the Lambs Club, New York, over signature of Billy Holbrook, who staged the recent "Kapital Kapers" revue at the National for Kay Ford and the Young Democrats.

Over here, this big envelope is from Bill Fields, one of the princes among press agents, who tells all about the many superlative qualities of the work being done at the Cape Playhouse and Cinema at Dennis, Mass., where he is ensconced for the so-called heated term—although it isn't up there—as principal cymbal-whanger for Raymond Moore, who founded this Cape Cod institution on June 29, 1926, and this one, not quite so large, graciously summons us to an "old-fashioned crab feast" for members of the Washington newspaper corps at 7, on Thursday, in the garden of the Mayflower, as guest of R. L. Pollio. I don't know how old-fashioneds go with crab feasts, but I'll try anything at least once—well, most anything!

• • • •

So the phone begins to jingle.

Will Witney wants to know if I'd heard that Nat B. Browne, executive secretary of the local Warner Brothers organization, is under the knife for a gastro-intestinal ailment that will require eight or ten weeks of hospitalization and that Al Waldron, local cameraman, still lies desperately ill in a hospital, from the effects of his junket to Ethiopia to photograph the war, while his wife is in an even more critical condition on another couch of pain. I hadn't, and am extremely sorry to hear it now.

Another ring says Ethel Barrymore has been having midnight X-rays at Emergency

The Prima Donna calls up to offer a reminder that it was Molasses 'n' January, coming to the Fox stage on Friday, who took part in that big broadcast and all-around merry-making two years ago right now in celebration of the first anniversary of the present ownership's operation of this estimable family journal and occasioned most of the merriment when a gay gang, including Charles Winninger, the Capt. Andy of "Showboat," now at RKO-Keith's; Tom Moore, two of the Three X Sisters, currently playing the Century in Baltimore; Conrad Thiebault and a few other night owls all adjourned to Tom O'Donnell's lobsterarium to watch the sun come up and a few sunny-side eggs go down, by way of breakfast. Charles Winninger composed a song in honor of the occasion that was a classic—or seemed so, at the time.

That last jingle was Ray Bell—no relation—reminding that they are previewing "Sins of Man" today at 1:30.

Let's-Not-Get-Personal Note.

That's no preview. Sounds more like the past just catching up!

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

The bill introduced by Representative Melvin J. Maas, of Minnesota, making it a felony for any member of Congress to participate in Federal patronage is still before the Judiciary Committee and not expected to be reported out at this session.

This is Maas' own opinion on the status of what he calls "my baby, considering it is part of the whole patronage and civil service question which I have been plugging for years."

Yesterday the primary election was held in Minnesota and the Congressman says that, if he is reelected, as he hopefully expects to be, he will put additional "teeth" in the bill and reintroduce it at the next session.

"The present bill is still buried, but if I come back next year I will introduce it, making it stronger, so that it will become a felony for anyone to solicit partonage as well as for Congressmen to participate in it or dispense it," he said.

Benefits Civil Service.

"The idea is to separate legislation from patronage, for I feel that dispensing patronage strikes directly at the whole system of democratic government."

"Such a bill would be of benefit and interest to every civil service employe in the Government service and to others interested in good government."

Mass has been a member of the House since 1926, except for one term, and, although he has long been an exponent of antipatronage, he sprang into national prominence a couple years ago for his quiet-voiced disarming of a demented spectator in the visitors' gallery who waved a gun and threatened to shoot. Dozens of members fled from the floor, but Maas walked calmly to the spot beneath the gallery where the man was brandishing his gun and ordered him to throw it down. The visitor did so just before guards rushed in the rear doors and overpowered him.

Agriculture Picnic Set.

The Department of Agriculture's second annual field day is scheduled for Sunday and, while the railroad has provided 4,000 tickets and accommodations to take that many from the city to Beltsville to the National Agricultural Research Center, those who are making the picnic arrangements are not quite hopeful of the turn-out.

They say, however, that there will be over 2,000 frolickers who will run potato races, play baseball, get sunburned (the sun being in that humor on the 21st), get completely tired out and altogether have a grand time. A number of the officials will be among the picnickers, but whether Secretary Wallace will be present is not certain, although he is a frequent visitor at Beltsville.

On the steering committee for the affair are Homer E. Pryor, AAA, president of the athletic association of the department; Joseph D. Cooper, Bureau of Biological Survey, and Archie C. Edwards, Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Gertrude E. Rest, in the Secretary's office, has charge of the tickets. Members of the Resettlement Administration who frequently participate in Agriculture's fun have been invited to join in the outing.

Veterans' Bonus Speeded.

All day today representatives of the Postoffice Department will sit in a special room of the Veterans' Administration Building helping to expedite the payment of cash to veterans who want to convert their bonus bonds in a rush. These representatives will give as many of the 1,145 veterans in the employ of the Administration as wish it, certificates for their bonds and return the bonds to the Postoffice Department to hurry this process along. In other Government departments, other postoffice representatives will sit, but it is said that the greatest number of veterans employed by the Government are in the Veterans' Administration.

Keep Babcock, Writer Says.

Here's a contribution to the column on the pro and anti Babcock situation raging within the ranks of the A. F. G. E. as to whether the president should be removed from office because of his pamphlet denouncing the "spoils system in the Administration."

"Well, I see where the American Federation of Government Employes is still in an uproar, but I believe this inter-lodge battle has started at the wrong time. It seems that all branches of the Government service are having a hard time of it at this time of the year, so why start a fight in the organization that is doing wonders for the Federal workers? I personally do not beleive that President E. Claude Babcock should be removed from office. He has fought many a battle for us, and please show me anyone that can equal his standing with the members of the A. F. G. E.

There is great sentiment among the Federal workers, and, take it from me, if Babcock is forced out of office then there will also be many members that will join the ranks of has-beens. In Babcock we have always found a great leader, and, believe you me, we will always need one. So in conclusion may I say, if A. F. G. E. loses Babcock, they will lose a man outstanding amongst men, and a gentleman."

"BOOTS."

National Park Service.

COMMUTERS' CONTRACT.

Commuting from my Connecticut home to my New York office last week, I found that kibitzing the daily contract game in the smoking car was the most intriguing way of passing the time. The caliber of play, I must admit, left something to be desired, but this was compensated by the pungent repartee among the players. Since I knew no one in the car, I felt that here was one game I could watch without the usual attendant risk of being drafted as referee to decide arguments and wagers. Here is one hand that created quite a furor.

South, dealer.

♥ Q 7
♦ 10 3 2

WEST
♠ J 7 3
♥ J 8 6
♦ J 9 5 4
♣ J 6 2

EAST
♠ K 6
♥ K 10 4 3 2
♦ Q 7 6

SOUTH
♠ A Q 10 9 8 4 2
♥ A 9 5
♦ A K 8
♣ None

The bidding was as remarkable as the play that followed:

South	West	North	East
2 spades	Pass	3 clubs	Pass
4 no trump	Pass	5 clubs	Pass
6 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

Obviously, South might have saved time and breath by opening up with a six-spade bid. His actual bidding amounted to the same thing, since his partner's club responses hardly could be called encouraging. North should have bid six clubs over the four no trump bid. Otherwise his bidding was correct. South stretched every one of his bids, including the first, to the breaking point.

But if my eyes popped slightly at the bidding, imagine how they must have protruded at the subsequent play, which was as follows.

West decided that a low trump was the safest opening. Unfortunately, East was so incensed at the fact that his king was being "led through" by his own partner that he refused to put it up, and declarer gathered in the trick with the ten spot. He then banged down the ace of trumps, chortling smugly when the king fell, and collected West's jack on the third round. (This was quite a feat, losing no trick to the outstanding trump combination)

Declarer's next attack was on the diamond suit. The ace and king were followed by a third round, and since East retained a death grip on his queen, he now found himself in the unenviable position of having to lead a heart or a club. Rather than lead into dummy's club tenace, he returned a low heart But this was just as satisfactory to declarer He played low from his own hand, won in dummy with the queen, discarded his remaining heart on the club ace, and claimed the remaining tricks. Result: Small slam bid and made!

West's roar drowned out the noise of the train.

"What do you mean by finessing against me on my first lead?" he bellowed. "What were you going to do with that blank king, give it to your wife for a birthday present?"

"What do you mean by leading a trump through me?" East yelled. "Where did you learn opening leads, out of the Settlement cook book?"

"And if you'd had the intelligence of an angleworm," West continued, not even listening, "you would have thrown that queen of diamonds on the ace or king! Couldn't you see even one play ahead, and figure out that you wouldn't be able to exist from your hand? We still could have beaten the contract two tricks by my winning the third diamond. We would have to get two heart tricks, instead of none!"

West's remarks were well founded. East, by the two frightful plays mentioned, had thrown three tricks to the declarer and permitted the remarkable slam contract to be fulfilled.

Pre-Fight Views See Schmeling in Upset; Louis Easy Winner

Bout to Fall Far Short Of Ballyhoo: German To Win After Struggle

Pre-Fight Bunk Doesn't Alter Fact Schmeling Is Still a Bum.

By Bill McCormick.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 15.—It seems high time to lift the veil of mystery, misinformation and plain bunk that is obscuring the bit of box-fighting business to be indulged in by Joe Louis and Max Schmeling here next Thursday night.

From the very day the pre-fight bally-hooey started it has been hammered into us that:

1. The bout will draw a million-dollar gate.

2. Something has happened to Joe Louis, he is not nearly the fighter he was when he stopped Max Baer, Primo Carnera, King Levinsky, et al.

3. Something has happened to Max Schmeling, he is not nearly the bum he was when he was stopped by Max Baer, outfumbled by Steve Hamas, et al.

Gate to Fall Short.

A private debunking investigation, which was started at Louis' Lakewood training camp yesterday and has carried us here, would lead one to believe that:

1. The gate will fall far short of the million-dollar mark.

2. Louis hasn't slipped and still remains the greatest piece of fighting machinery extant.

3. Schmeling, although in fine physical fettle, still is a bum.

Those close to the ticket situation and with a finger on the pulse of the public admit there has been no such great demand for tickets to this execution as preceded the slaughter of Max Baer, which grossed just under $1,000,000 in the same Yankee Stadium, where the impending carnage will happen. Those in charge of the box office claim there already is $500,000 in the till, but none takes that claim too seriously. It is tacitly admitted that $40 tops is too high for the forthcoming fisticuffling.

Now it seems that Promoter Jacobs "got religion" at the wrong time and the gate for the Louis-Schmeling fight will suffer accordingly. The $123,310,000 bonus money released here today may raise the box office blood pressure, but that is a forlorn hope. So much for the gate.

Now for Louis.

It is not necessary to take anyone's word on the subject of the brown bomber. The Louis I saw at Lakewood yesterday was the best Louis that ever crawled between the ropes. Bigger, better and bolder in every respect, it was almost impossible to detect any flaws in his fighting form or condition.

Louis Filling Out.

We have been told that Louis was getting too fat, that he would swell himself right out of the picture in the natural course of events. Such is not the case. Trainer Jack Blackburn, probably the finest conditioner and handler of this generation, insisted more than a year ago that Joe would weigh between 218 and 220 before he finished growing.

"That is the weight we are aiming for," Blackburn said just before his charge fought Natie Brown in Detroit. "The frame is there, and we are going to fill it out to the proper weight."

That is exactly what is happening. It is all being done very scien-

Fight Held Loaded With Dynamite and Right for an Upset.

By George Kirksey.
Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Napanoch, N. Y., June 15.—The Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight is loaded with the stuff from which upsets are born.

Memories are short along Cauliflower alley. It was just about this time a year ago that the same sort of a set-up existed for the Max Baer-James J. Braddock fight. Baer was a sure thing, a 10-to-1 favorite who couldn't lose. Yet Braddock walked out of the ring world's champion. Tunney's triumph over Dempsey at Philadelphia, Corbett's victory over Sullivan at New Orleans, Kid Lavigne's win over Joe Walcott—ring history is filled with amazing upsets which mushroomed from sure things.

The only sure thing is that there is no sure thing.

Louis will have to whip Schmeling with his fists in the ring. The Brown Bomber had Max Baer, Primo Carnera, King Levinsky, Charlie Retzlaf and Paulino Uzcudun licked before they crawled into the ring; they all "died in the dressing room" as they say along Punch promenade. They didn't have the heart when the big test came.

Courage His Big Point.

Courage is Schmeling's greatest asset. He is not afraid of Louis. But the wise boys do not even believe that. They say the German is like all the rest—he'll be terror stricken when the zero hour approaches.

But what if he isn't? What if Louis hits him and he doesn't go down? What if Schmeling stands up and fights the Negro? Patsy Perroni did it. Louis knocked him down several times, lost heart when he didn't finish him and fought only in streaks for ten rounds. Adolf Walter clipped Louis one on the chin, and made him go on the defensive. Louis had Natie Brown on the floor in the first round and couldn't finish him in 15 rounds.

Louis is a great front runner, he looked invincible against the terror-stricken Baer. But even in this fight he became discouraged, and said to Jack Blackburn at the end of the second round:

"Chapple, he's just like hitting a stone wall. I can't do anything with him."

Blackburn, fearing Louis might give up his chance of scoring a quick K. O. said:

"Well, if he can keep taking 'em you can keep hitting him can't you? Keep on hitting him."

Schmeling has more at stake in this fight than some realize. In many quarters the belief is prevalent that Schmeling is here just to get 30 per cent of the gate (a purse which should be between $250,000 and $300,000). The German has more to lose than money can gain for him by being knocked out by a negro. Race-conscious Germany will never forgive him. He is risking his popualrity in the Fatherland, where he is an idol. He has enough money to keep him the rest of his days without fighting Louis. It takes supreme confidence in your ability to do what Schmeling is doing.

Granted that Schmeling's courage will not waver, he can't spring the upset of the century unles he's in condition. After examining him Sunday Dr. William Walker, New York State athletic commissioner, said:

"Schmeling is in the finest condition he has ever attained for a fight in this country."

Still the Teuton can't win on courage and condition alone. He must have some fighting equipment. His three best punches are:

His Weapons.

1. Right hand over his opponent's left. His K. O. punch.

2. Left hook to body, used to wear an opponent down.

3. Right hand uppercut, a new addition to his repertoire.

His best punch is a right hand. He drops it off his chest, fast and short. The answer to whether Louis can take it will be supplied when this punch strikes him. His left hook isn't a great punch but it will be effectvie in a long fight. It was this blow which softened up Stribling for a fifteenth round K. O. at Cleveland. Theoretically Louis is a perfect target for a right uppercut. The Negro fights bent over with his arms in front of him, and an uppercut delivered accurately couldn't miss.

How will Schmeling fight him? He won't say, but Dempsey says the only way to beat Louis is to keep inside him.

"Louis is primarily a counter puncher," says Dempsey. "And the only way to beat him is stay on top of him and jolt him with short punches to the belly and chin."

Dempsey described Schmeling's style exactly.

Schmeling's greatest drawback seems to be his slow starting. His chances will increase every round the fight lasts. If he weathers Louis' early attack in the first four rounds, he will start to come on and be dangerous.

Poor Fight Advance Blamed on Jewish Dislike of German

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 15.—A Jewish boycott of the Louis-Schmeling bout, scheduled to be held here next Thursday night, is believed responsible for lighter-than-expected advance sales which presage a gross gate of not more than $800,000, instead of the $1,200,000 receipts expected by the promoters a few weeks ago.

The boycott, in the form of a circular letter mailed to prominent New York Jews, is based on Schmeling's avowed close connection with Dictator Adolph Hitler and the fact that he generally is considered a representativeof Nazi Germany.

The letter asks those to whom it is addressed not only to remain away from the bout, but to influence their friends and employes to not go. Many large New York firms, which for past fights had purchased large blocks of tickets for employes, are not buying tickets for this bout.

Strangely enough, Schmeling is managed by Joe Jacobs—a Jew—and the German is training at a Jewish resort.

The boycott—and the fact that the bout is being broadcast—plus the high scale of prices, which range to $40, has so retarded the sales that the belief is generally prevalent that the price of all tickets will be reduced Thursday.

Wrestle Fans To Get Details On Fight

Jimmy Lake Will Describe Louis-Schmeling Bout Between Mat Goes.

Announcement that wrestling fans will miss no detail of the New York heavyweight boxing bout bringing together Joe Louis and Max Schmeling in the big town Thursday night today was made by promoter Joe Turner.

Aware of the unusual interest aroused in this competition, Turner is arranging for Col. Jimmy Lake to furnish Griffith Stadium patrons with a complete ringside description of hostilities.

Turner also disclosed he intended hauling Chief Little Wolf on the carpet on his arrival here and warn him against crowd and referee baiting, when he meets Dean Detton in their finish match Thursday.

Declaring that the Indian is excitable and loses his head unless properly curbed, Turner also will advise Thursday's referee to keep the situation well in hand from the starting signal.

"This doesn't mean that Little Wolf will in any way be handcuffed," Turner declared yesterday. "I merely want to impress on him that certain rules must be observed and that I'm booking him in here to please, and not offend, my fans."

Harris to Use Chapman as Lead-Off

Pilot Thinks Ex-Yankee Is Ideal Man for Top Spot in Line-Up.

Nat Chieftains Feel They Made Smart Move to Get Chapman.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

En Route to Chicago, June 15.—Venturing once more into the West on a swing through every hinterland city in the league, the Nats will present a new lead-off batter famed as the fastest man in the big leagues.

Along with Jake Powell's No. 4 uniform, Ben Chapman has inherited Powell's top spot in the Nats' batting order. Manager Bucky Harris, surveying the talents of his hitters, has determined upon Chapman as the most proficient lead-off performer, but his decisoin in that matter is not final.

"Chapman appears to me to be an ideal man for the job," said Harris, as he made away with numerous tasty viands in the dining car tonight. "But I want to talk to him when he joins us in Detroit tomorrow. Some ball players are finicky about where they hit and I want to get Chapman's ideas on the subject.

Harris Likes Deal.

"He never led off the batting order for the Yankees, who always had other great lead-off men, and if he isn't partial to batting first, why I'd like to find another spot for him if it can be done.

"But, frankly, I don't think Chapman cares particularly in which spot he hits. I want to be fair with him, but unless he is positive that leading off interferes with his effectiveness, he looks like our lead-off man."

The passage of 24 hours has done nothing to disturb the belief of Harris that the Nats benefited from the deal which brought Chapman from the Yankees in exchange for Powell.

"If you want my opinion on the deal," said Harris, "why, I just think that Chapman is a bit better ball player. That's why we made the trade."

To Face Tribe, Chicago.

After a three-day stay at Detroit, the Nats move on to Cleveland for three games, thence to St. Louis for four, thence to Chicago for three. Before returning for the July 4 double-header at Griffith Stadium with the Yankees, the Nats encounter the Athletics in four games at Shibe Park.

Nine games out of the lead, but only a game and a half behind third place, the Nats still regard themselves as a strong first division possibility and even a pennant threat if the team's pitching improves.

Earl Whitehill will go to the mound tomorrow in the first game at Detroit.

Two new faces will be among the Nats when they set up quarters at Detroit. In addition to Ben Chapman, who will report from New York, Pitcher Joe Cascarella, acquired from the Red Sox over the week-end, will report to Manager Harris.

Cascarella was a relief artist with the Red Sox, but Harris will give him a chance to start a game the first time one of his regular pitchers is unavailable.

French Will Have Team in Olympics

Cabinet Still Faces Fight to Finance Athlete's Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 15.—The French government's decision to send a team of athletes to the Olympic games at Berlin this summer was announced today by Leo Lagrange, undersecretary of fine arts, sports and leisure.

The cabinet, however, still faces a fight to get an appropriation from Parliament to finance the team.

"A small squad will go to the games in Berlin," Lagrange said. Another squad will participate in the "workers' Olympics" in Barcelona.

The Socialist Party, majority group in France's government several weeks ago voted against France's participation in the Olympic games. Sports leaders said, at the time, the Socialist decision will have a great influence when the Chamber of Deputies meets to vote on the 1,800,000 francs sought for the Olympic budget.

Bout With Ross Is Offered Canzoneri

Tony Must Surrender Title; Jacobs Plans Double Feature.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 15.—Tony Canzoneri, the grand old man of the fight game, will be asked to vacate his lightweight title so that he can be given a shot at Barney Ross' welterweight crown.

The matter will be decided before the New York State Athletic Commission next Wednesday afternoon, and, if Tony agrees to surrender his laurels, he will be matched with Ross by Promoter Mike Jacobs, of Twentieth Century Club.

While refusing to say definitely what he intended to do, it is generally understood that Tony will forfeit his 135-pound diadem for the privilege of seeking to wrest the welterweight title from his perennial enemy, Ross.

Canzoneri dropped his lightweight crown to Ross a number of years ago. Barney successfuly defended the valuable bauble in a rematch. Later, Ross outgrew the division and surrendered the title so that he could meet Jimmy McLarnin for the welterweight crown. He won from McLarnin—and has been champion of the 145-pound division since then.

Canzoneri won back the championship he once had held by defeating Lou Ambers in a bout declared by the New York commission to be for the lightweight title.

It is Jacobs' intention to stage a double-title fight, with Canzoneri and Ross fighting in one bout and Lou Ambers and Pedro Montanez fighting for the lightweight crown in the other half of the double feature.

Notre Dame Schedules S. Methodist for 1939

South Bend, Ind., June 15 (AP).—Elmer F. Layden, Notre Dame athletic director, announced today the scheduling of a football game with Southern Methodist for October 14, 1939. The game will be played here.

The football teams of the two schols last met in 1930, when Joe Savoldi scored a touchdown in the final quarter to give Knute Rockne's national championship eleven a 20 to 14 victory.

Southern Methodist is the third new team on Notre Dame's 1939 schedule, Georgia Tech and Iowa being the others.

Mary Cootes Wins, 7-5, 8-6; Extended by Eleanor Craven

By John R. Vosburgh.

Mary Cootes, tall, hard-slamming girl from Alexandria and ranking women's player of the Washington area, opened defense of her District championship yesterday at Columbia Country Club and immediately ran into trouble. Before she soved her difficulties and gained the second round she had been carried to scores of 7—5, 8—6 by a comparatively unknown player, Eleanor Craven.

Miss Craven, one of the city's more-obscure young ladies of the court, was anything but obscure with the tactics she showered upon the champon. A former summer school teacher at Cornell, she proceeded to give Miss Cootes a lesson in court strategy and court coverage.

Miss Craven missed taking the first set by a narrow margin after deucing it, and it was the Alexandria girl's powerful stroking which eventually proved the deciding factor. In the second set, the unseeded young lady actually had set point at 6—5 and 40—30, only to err on the crucial point which would have deadlocked the match.

The title-holder went on to take the game and sweep through the next two games as her tiring opponent finally began to fade. Seeded No. 2, Miss Cootes will play Margaret Butler today at 4:30 p. m.

The No. 1 seeded player, Edith Clarke, finalist in the recent City of Washington tournament, gained the second round with two victories in which she lost but three games. In a preliminary round match the bronzed Miss Clarke subdued Ruth Sowers, 6—0, 6—0 and then vanquished Emily Davis, 6—2, 6—1.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.
Preliminary Round.

Mrs. Nathan Wyeth won from Eleanor Pinckel by default; Anne Davett (Baltimore) defeated Margot Lee, 2—6, 6—2, 6—4; Polly Walker defeated Virginia Hall, 6—4, 6—3; Edith Clarke defeated Ruth Sowers, 6—0, 6—0; Emily Davis defeated Florence Joyce, 6—1, 6—0; Florence Black defeated Adelaid Orem, 6—3, 6—1.

First Round.

Scott Pounds Battalino To Win

Cowboy Piles Up Early Lead; Decision Is Unanimous.

Davis and Raymond in Draw; Mack Wins Over Carrier.

By Ben Dulaney.

The left hand of Cowboy Howard Scott won a unanious decision over one-time featherweight champion Bat Battalino in the feature bout at Griffith Stadium last night. It was a battle of two boys who'd rather fight than eat, and the slim crowd of less than 2,000 hardly sounded a lonesome boo.

Battalino, showing the effects of age in his attempted comeback as a lightweight, was a perfect target for Scott's left during all ten rounds and albeit that left and the hard right swings apparently didn't do him serious damage, he was seldom able to connect with a clean blow himself.

The Hartford veteran did his best to make up for his inability to reach the cowboy by his experienced infighting tactics. He did his noblest to rush the latter off his feet—and actually did so on two occasions. But Scott kept his head. At every lunge he'd back away and in would come that insistent left.

Scott Uses His Right.

The fight started slowly, with Scott landing numerous light lefts to the one-time champion's face. Bat followed the cowboy all around the ring in the first round, but scarcely landed a blow.

Scott opened the second by neatly stumbling over himsef and going down for the count of one, but came back to land three neat rights to the face while the Hartford boy was sending wild swings at nowhere in particular. No damage had yet been done.

Things then began to open up. The continuous pepper of Scott's left in the face finally got the Bat mad and he sailed in with his old-time fighting grin. But his attacks during the third and fourth were largely failures. The cowboy, young and agile, was keeping away from Battalino's deadly infighting. The third was closely Scott's round, while the fourth was close.

Scott used his right for the first time in the fifth. He used it once, twice, a dozen times. He mixed in

Major Loops Have Big Day Wishing

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 15.—The standings say there was no activity in the major leagues today, but in this the standings lie.

There was probably more activity, signifying less, than in any other day this season, as managers and owners conferred in desperation on the last day in which unrestricted trading is permitted.

After today, each club must ask waivers on a player before disposing of him, a fact which usually limits the owners to a late-season traffic in left-hand catchers and worn-out veterans.

Since these last-day offers and refusals are known only to the owners and managers themselves, baseball critics were forced to guess vaguely that the clubs wanted something like this:

Cards: A league coalition against the Cubs.

Cubs: An amendment to the National League constitution permitting them to play all their games in Wrigley Field.

Pirates: A shot in the arm for Arky Vaughan and another pitcher like, say, Van Lingle Mungo.

Giants: A re-deal on the Leroy Parmelee-Burgess Whitehead deal, and a new set of legs for Bill Terry and Travis Jackson.

Reds: A first baseman, more evening performances, and music between innings.

Bees: More cast-offs like Danny MacFayden.

Phils: Permission to move the franchise, and more players to trade to the Cubs.

Dodgers: A ball club, a little less chaos on and off the field and $500,000 for Mungo.

Yankees: An official decree ending the season before somebody discovers what's holding them up.

Red Sox: More "farms" like the Hank Greenberg.

Tigers: Mickey Cochrane and Athletics.

Indians: A portable ball park and a little consideration for Johnny Allen's nerves.

Senators: The continued support of Col. Jake Ruppert.

White Sox: A lifting of the "evil hand" and a little less competition from the Cubs.

Athletics: More men like Tom Yawkey.

Browns: A pitcher who can finish a ball game.

Trainer Suspended, 3 Horses Barred in Charles Town Doping

Banana, $24 Victor, Was 'Touched'

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 15.—The first doping case of the current West Virginia racing session was unearthed today when the stewards suspended Trainer H. W. Wageley for violation of rule 144 of the State code. This rule deals with the stimulation of horses. It seems that someone connected with the horse Banana believed he would win here last Saturday providing he had a "little help," as the horsemen call stimulating. Banana, according to the saliva test, was "touched" and he ran accordingly, winning with ease to pay a $24 mutuel.

Banana, along with the horses Carteret and Jinneal, trained by Wageley, have been barred for the remainder of the meeting.

The day's feature race went to Hard Chase, a daughter of Purchase. She scored a thrilling nose decision over Wise Sister, with Passing Sun third and three lengths away. Jockey Pikor rode a heady race on Hard Chase and brought her from out of the pack at the far turn to collar Wise Sister in the final sixteenth. However, the latter might have won with better handling. She came again in the last few yards and narrowly missed taking the verdict.

Hard Chase was only lukewarm in the betting and paid $11.60. A daily double of $36.80 on the combination of Skyride and Hurdy Gurdy.

The Washington News Purse, the fifth race, went to Nay Nay at a surprising $17 mutuel. The unfashionable G. Terhune did the riding and he made no mistakes. Barn Stormer, lunged into the air at the break, and then had to circle her field to be second. With better luck she would have won. Veritas was third in the field of seven.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAY NAY, $17.00, $5.00, $3.80; BARNSTORMER, $3.80, $2.80; VERITAS, $3.60.

NAY NAY rushed up on the inside, shook off ADA WAN to take command entering the stretch but had to be hard ridden to stave off the closing rush of BARNSTORMER. The latter, probably best, lunged at the break and dropped to last, circled her field nearing the stretch, but hung in the final sixteenth. VERITAS broke well, but dropped back and then closed willingly. ROYAL VEIL was blocked entering the stretch and closed gamely. ADA WAN quit after running with NAY NAY.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:09½. Off at 5:09½. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Elliott's br. f. (4), Purchase—Hardy Fern. Trained by L. Taylor. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:27 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARD CHASE, $11.60, $5.40, $3.80; WISE SISTER, $4.00, $3.40; CLIFTON'S NELL, $8.40.

HARD CHASE, forced to race very wide going into the first turn, came with a rush on the outside swinging for the stretch while saving ground and just lasted after taking command in midstretch. WISE SISTER, sent to the front at once, shook off SCOTTY DON at the far turn, swung wide entering the stretch and came again after being headed. PASSING SUN, slow to strike best stride, closed a gain in the final eighth. CLIFTON'S NELL showed a good effort. McKELL went forwardly, but had to be pulled up leaving the backstretch and failed to rally thereafter. BONNIE DHU could not reach contention. SCOTTY DON quit.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:39½. Winner, Claud Feltner's ch. g. (4), Sedgefield—Charlotte O. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOBAKHETA, $7.60, $4.60, $3.60; PLAIN ACE, $9.40, $4.40; BRIGHT SPIRITS, $3.80.

JOBAKHETA, under slight restraint while following the pace of PLAIN ACE, took command and leaving the backstretch, drew far out and was being eased in the last sixteenth. PLAIN ACE, quickest to begin, was rated along in front, but could not resist JOBAKHETA when put to a drive. BRIGHT SPIRITS, forwardly placed all the way, closed willingly. PORPHYRY went evenly, but failed to threaten. BAY WRACK raced wide. DEARZIN was never a factor.

Spencer, Balestri Tie Walper, Buck in Pro-Amateur Tourney

4 Other Pairs In 2d Place Deadlock

Victors Card Best Ball of 67; Spencer Takes Pro Sweepstakes.

By Dave Herman.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam Country Club's long-driving professional and one of his cracker-jack simon-pure partners, Joe Balestri, tied with Leo Walper, walloping Bethesda driving range tutor, and Dr. Calvert E. Buck, president of Washington Golf and Country Club and former champion in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament at Beaver Dam yesterday.

Each team posted a best ball of 67, five under par, with the Spencer-Balestri combination scoring 34—33, and Walper and Buck, 33—34.

They set a burning pace for 37 other teams from Maryland, Virginia and the District.

Four other pro-amateur duos tied for the runner-up prize. Wiffy Cox, the Kenwood Klouter, playing in his first tournament since he tied for fifth in the National Open at Baltusrol, had the good fortune to share in victories with amateur partners.

Spencer Wins Prize.

Cox teamed with Bernie Hallock, the handsome Kenwood Golf and Country Club invitation tournament champion, and they carved out a dandy 34—34—68. The Kenwood pro and Dave Herman, of Beaver Dam, also scored 34—34—68.

Tied with these two combinations were the teams of Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, and Max Taylor, of Beaver Dam, and Walper and T. J. Meany, of Beaver Dam. Shorey and Taylor had a brace of 34s, and the latter two, out in 36, made the last nine in 32, thanks to three strokes Meany helped Walper.

Host Pro Spencer won the individual professional sweepstakes with a 36-35—71, one under par, after grabbing birdies on the twelfth, fourteenth and fifteenth.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

En Route to Chicago, June 15.

The former newspapermen who are attending to the publicity job for the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling affair apparently have received their orders from the front office and are doing the job in a grand manner.

It is a double-track campaign that Promoter Mike Jacobs' staff is conducting, founded on the twin objectives: Building up Schmeling as a game guy with a chance to win, and tearing down the picture of Louis as the unbeatable killer of the prize ring.

POVICH.

The same typing fingers which were acclaiming Louis as the greatest since Dempsey, when the Negro needed building up preliminary to the Carnera bout, are now pointing out the ticks in his fighting armor and blithely proceeding to point out that his sparmates have been hitting him regularly and without great difficulty.

And from Schmeling's camp at Napanoch, N. Y., the mimeograph machine grinds out the news that the German is a fighting fury personified in his workouts, a changed man. He has reverted to his weaving, bobbing style that marked his early successes in this country, they'd have you know, and it will be a new Schmeling that Louis will be facing.

The big idea, of course, is to convey that the fight will be worth while seeing, even from the $40 ringside seats, and the tom-tom beaters could hardly expect to get results were they to harp upon the Negro's well-known numbing qualities. Three, six or nine minutes of fighting, which is the bout's ordinary expectancy, would hardly appeal to the folks who pay the freight.

So, Louis must be pictured as something less than a cinch to win. Tales of added weight that is slowing him up help to serve the purpose, and it doesn't hurt the cause to let it be known that his sparmates have been taking great liberties with the Negro. Anything, in fact, that can sow the seeds of doubt as to Louis' invulnerability is a happy thought to the people charged with luring in the customers. But the folks in Schmeling's camp are having an easier job of it. The talents of the 21-year-old Louis, who figures to improve, not retrogress, are too well known even to fight fans. Schmeling provides a better medium for the build-up than the Negro does for sabotage.

They are raising a general hue and cry over Schmeling's game qualities in the ring and pointing out that the German has never shown the white feather in his career. He will, they say, provide Louis with his first real test, this Schmeling who knows no fear, and will stand up and fight.

But if this department remembers rightly, Primo Carnera, Max Baer and King Levinsky were supposed to be game guys before they met up with Louis. Yet their knees figuratively rattle like castanets the moment they set foot in the ring against Louis. The Negro apparently does something to his opponent's sense of fear and there is no guarantee that Schmeling won't undergo a similar reaction when he crawls between the ropes. They are making a great play, too, about Schmeling's short right hand with which he is supposed to be knocking sparring partners stiff. The publicity staff has seized upon that short right as the ideal weapon with which to beat a man of Louis' type. Mebbe so; anyway, it's something to write about.

In Short—

With a fine disregard for Nazi policy, Schmeling is training at a Jewish country club up at Napanoch, N. Y. . . . Champion Jim Braddock, in a current magazine article, points out that after Carnera belted Joe Louis on the mouth the Negro wiped his face with his glove and then looked at the glove to see if Primo had drawn blood . . . that kind of a move by Louis, if repeated against Braddock, would promptly net the Negro a sock on the jaw, according to the champion . . . Braddock has the slow-motion pictures of all of Louis' recent fights and is studying 'em in anticipation of a Louis bout in September . . . Schmeling claims that Louis purposely is short with his dynamite left hooks in the early rounds in order to lure his opponents into a false sense of security . . . he'd prefer not to depend on Louis being short with that left hook that stowed Carnera and Baer away.

Welsh-Reese Net Final Postponed Indefinitely

West Hartford, Conn., June 15 (AP). The final-round match of the New England men's tennis championships between Bernard F. Welsh, of Rockville, Md., and William Reese, of the University of North Carolina, was again postponed here today because of rain. Officials announced that the match is postponed indefinitely.

Gilbert Hunt Leading As Rain Halts Net Play

Philadelphia, June 15 (AP).—Rain interrupted many of the opening matches of the Pennsylvania State men's tennis tournament today.

Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., a favorite to win the State title left undefended by Barney Welsh, also of the Capital, defeated Peter Blanchard, of Orange, N. J., 6—3, and was trailing 4—5 in the second when rain halted the match.

Louis Favored To Win; Fight Overrated

tifically. For each fight Louis weighs in just a few pounds more than for the previous battle. For Baer he weighed a fraction over 200 pounds. After his workout yesterday, he scaled 199¼. He will record 202 pounds on the scales at the official testing of tonnages here Wednesday afternoon.

Those who have been in camp with Louis since his training siege began admit that he has been working under wraps for the most part. He was working under wraps yesterday, but it was all trainer Blackburn could do to keep him from casting aside the wraps and running all his sparmates out of camp.

He did cut loose on Salvadore Rugierello. Joe has no love for Ruzy, a big, awkward fellow with a terrific right hand who tried to sneak over a knockout punch on the Detroit detonator while he was training for the Baer encounter. So badly did Louis batter him yesterday that Salvadore "retired" after one round, absolutely refusing to work any more and drawing his walking papers from Joe's handlers.

Stronger, Timing Better.

Louis also worked beautifully against his other sparmates, blocking, ducking, punching when he felt like it and at times even changing the direction of punches after they had been launched—and staggering his human punching bags with those wallops. When he wished to, he seemed to work perfectly against any style of boxer they tossed in the ring. His timing is sharper than for the Baer bout, the added weight has increased his strength—and he is in better condition.

The criterion of his condition lay in the fact that he was breathing easily after six fast rounds yesterday and in his mental attitude. For the first time since he hit the big time, Louis has become surly—always a sign of fine fighting fettle. A few more days of training and he probably would be as grouchy and cantankerous as a Washington baseball player, but right now the ill-humor is submerged and only pops up occasionally.

By ring time he should literally be "fighting mad."

Schmeling's Condition.

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, once one of the cleverest boxers in the business, went into raves about Louis' performance yesterday, declaring Joe was one of the most wonderful fighters the ring ever has known. This will just give you an idea.

As to Schmeling, one has only the reports of fistic "authorities," who state that if condition could beat Louis, Der Schlager might have a chance. Those who have seen him work claim he is slower than ever before and being badly shoved around by a crew of tenth-rate sparring partners who couldn't fight in four-round preliminaries in Washington.

Max, so they say, has proven an easy mark for left hands all during his training routine, and shows only one weapon that may prove effective—a straight right hand.

Jack Hurley, one of the better fistic authorities, pointed out to the writer today that the battle between Louis and Schmeling may be likened to a fight between a man armed with a single-shot rifle and a man wielding a machine gun.

Like Rifle vs. Tommy Gun.

"Schmeling has a rifle in that right," Hurley says. "He can fire one shot and if that misses, he's a dead duck. Louis fires every conceivable punch from every conceivable angle. Like a man with a machine gun, he does'nt even have to aim, but just pulls the triggers and sprays his target."

They say that Schmeling, who despite his calm exterior is prone to worrying over impending fights, really believes that he can beat Louis. They say he will not be mortally afraid of the Tan Tornado, when he enters the ring.

Tomorrow we shall attempt to penetrate the wilds of upper New York to see Der Schlager in his training camp at Napanoch. We'll try to read his mind—if there is any thing written there. Anyway, we can record his last words for posterity.

29 Roosevelt Athletes to Graduate

By John R. Vosburgh.

Roosevelt High's largest graduating class in the school's history, 360 strong, holds its commencement exercises in Roosevelt Stadium this afternoon where its 29 graduating athletes will be more conspicuous than numerous.

The stadium should be a particularly appropriate spot for the 29 to receive their sheepskins. Such well-known Rough Rider sports figures as Spero Kolius, Ed Lyman, George and Francis Coakley, Harry Silverman and Gus Papanicolas—to mention only a few—would doubtless be more at home out on the field in uniform than in their graduation garb.

At any rate, this squad of 29 represents a brand of graduating athlete which neither Roosevelt nor Old Business probably ever surpassed in quality. Kolius, All-High in basketball, a top-notch end on the gridiron and a good weight man in track and field, has accumulated six sports "stripes," a feat never before accomplished by a Roosevelt athlete.

Originally bound for George Washington, Kolius is now headed for Maryland, which, in this writer's opinion, is a break for Maryland. Francis Beamer, another fine end and basketball player, is already out at College Park, having been graduated in February.

Coach Lynn Woodworth of the football team is rather hard hit by graduation, losing a dozen men, ten of them regulars, either by February or June graduation. Papanicolas and Julius Lewis were two of the outstanding guards in local football, incidentally. Lewis, by the way, expects to enter North Carolina in the fall.

Coach Herman Littman of the basketball and baseball teams also experiences some sad losses. The court team not only lost Beamer and Kolius but both Coakley twins, the fast-shooting Harry Silverman and Substitute Phil Scheinerman.

Scott Is Winner Over Battalino

those left jabs to the face. At the bell the once great little battler from Connecticut was groggy and the crowd was on its feet yelling for a knockout.

The cowboy kept it up in the sixth, kept that tattoo of blows falling on Bat but somehow seemed just as tired as the New England boy at the end. Toward the latter part of the round Bat took the aggressive and came close to evening up the period.

Scott, blood coming from an old cut on his eyebrow, got the worst of the seventh and it began to look like a close fight after all. The Bat, although he continued to miss with regularity, landed one left and one right which really hurt.

It was in the ninth that Battalino turned into an Italian wildman. He sailed in, both arms wildly swinging, tangled with the cowboy and both men fell through the ropes to the canvas. Up again, the Bat continued the attack but Scott, backing away, always was there with that left. The Bat did his best in the tenth but the cowboy fended off the wild lunges to take the round.

They called the 6-round semi-final between Washington's Roddy Davis and Lou Raymond, of Baltimore a draw. Large hoots of derision came from the crowd which, although cheering for Davis, had decided he was a badly beaten boy. The local fighter was on the defensive from the opening bell and battled most of the way with a badly cut eye. Raymond, heavier in both weight and experience, apparently had things largely his own way.

Stanford Carrier met a letter-downer in the person of Ritchie Mack, San Antonio stablemate of Cowboy Scott. Mack, who looked half done before the fight started, gained a unanimous decision over the Capitol "comer" in a 6-round effort full of punch. Carrier went down for no count

Drought Fears Drive Wheat 3¼c Higher

Chicago, June 15. — Speculative buying on the broadest scale in many months accompanied a crop damage scare today as to spring wheat, and whirled prices wildly skyward. Stocks Edge Forward in Slow Trading; Wheat Is Strong; Government Bonds Firm.

New York, June 15.—Money markets were unaffected in rates on the enormous financial turnover incident to the income tax payments, the billion of new money for the Treasury, the huge soldiers' bonus and the usual mid-June dividend payments. Government bonds were quiet but firm.

Stocks plugged along with prices generally higher at the close on a turnover of less than 800,000 shares, the smallest in a week. September wheat closed 2⅝ cents higher at 88⅞ cents a bushel, the rise following reports of devastating weather in the Western area. Cotton moved forward to its best price of the year.

Expecting nothing from politics of either an upsetting or a helpful nature until much later in the campaign, as the Democratic nominations and platform already are taken as a matter of course, the securities markets settled down to a slow, steady grind. A firm tone was well maintained from the start, but little disposition was shown for speculative plunges on either side.

Stocks have been shaken down to prices that apparently can be supported by the current rate of business activity and by the reasonable expectations of autumn business. If the political element is playing an important part at all, it is mainly in the utility section. Reviving hopes for extermination, or at least amelioration, of the New Deal probably are giving a fillip to the market for public utilities. It is difficult to determine the future of some utility stocks in case of New Deal success this autumn, whereas a Republican victory undoubtedly would be greatly stimulating to the section.

Other items than a change in Government policy to permit private operation on a profit motive are just now aiding utility securities. They include the general rise in business activity and the tiring from its own exertions of the drive for public ownership, the recent cut in coal rates on the railroads and the low interest rates on new money and on refunding bonds.

Trade News Dull.

Trade news over the week-end was of no great importance. This week the steel industry, according to estimates of the American Iron & Steel Institute, will increase its operating rate to 70 per cent of capacity, against 69.5 per cent last week and 38.3 per cent a year ago. Such a high rate for this time of year is encouraging, both for the steel company earnings and as indicative of a fairly high general level of business activity.

Although nothing spectacular took place in foreign exchanges over the week-end, the market began with a continuation of past trends, namely weakness in francs and other gold currencies and a rise in sterling. The flow of funds from the gold standard countries is, therefore, continuing, and probably will go on until the franc is taken off gold.

Probably France is nearing the point where no further attempt will be made to keep up the semblance of that deflation necessary to keep the currency on gold. In any event, the uncertainty over the new government's intentions in other directions is upsetting. Political and social unrest in France is growing, and under such circumstances capital must be expected to show nervous haste to seek more sheltered places.

Utilities Active.

Public utility stocks kept their position as the trading feature and accounted for a large share of the turnover. Consolidated Edison led in activity and it rose a point. North American, Pacific Gas, Pacific Lighting and Water Works worked upward. Public Service dipped a point and then recovered. Local tractions had one of their periodic sprees. I. R. T. and Manhattan Elevated rose a point or more. B. M. T. and B. Q. T. advanced moderately.

Standard Oil led its group higher. Indiana was an exception. Rails were fractionally irregular. Great Northern, Southern and Santa Fe hardened. Rail equipments, motor accessories, steels and metals found better conditions. Motor shares stiffened, but gains were small. Mack Trucks hit up a fast pace with a 2-point advance.

Farm implement stocks again were buoyant. Case jumped more than 5 points to the best price in six years. Mail orders were firm. Tobacco stocks weakened. Stocks to rise 1 to 5 points were Can, Sugar, Woolen preferred, Bon Ami, A. E. G. Budd preferred, Douglas, Gamewell, Kinney preferred, Mengel preferred, Western Union and Minneapolis Moline preferred. Losses of 1 to 3 points were suffered by Shipbuilding, Byers and Yellow Truck preferred, Storage Battery, Federal Mining and Jewel Tea.

Brokers' Loans.

The income tax date usually brings a rise in brokers' loans. Part of the expansion comes from loans made for payment of taxes, and part is for funds needed to pay for new Government loans requiring payment on that date. This time the dealers' proportion of the billion in new issues seems to have been smaller than usual, and consequently their loans ought to be less extensive, although the total probably will be high because of the enormous amount of new funds acquired by the Treasury. The action of the stock market has suggested little if any offset to tax date borrowing.

Coal and Ore.

The railroads have made little response to the I. C. C. decision to give a six months' extension to the emergency freight rates, in part. At best the decision had negative value, and the prospect is for no further extension. The clip from the schedules of the higher charges on coal and ore may possibly have had some beneficial effects for the utility and certain manufacturing stocks, on the theory that coal and ore costs might possibly decline, but it means lower revenue, other things being equal, for Chesapeake & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, and Great Northern—to mention a few leading carriers. Both the Norfolk and the C. & O. can stand the strain, and Great Northern also now seems to be back in the prosperity column.

Rate Effect.

The effect of freight rates on industry is by no means a simple mathematical problem. The I. C. C. was not confronted by the problem of whether the steel industry, for example, and its customers were able to pay the higher rates on ore and coal than the roads were to accept lower rates. The effect of freight rates for raw materials on the price of finished products is a complex one, and the railroads are consumers of steel and other materials into the cost of which ore and coal freight rates enter. As a principle, lower freight rates mean lower manufacturing and consuming costs, which in turn promote the movement of a larger volume of goods and tend to increase railroad earnings, but that is not necessarily true in all instances. A complicating factor is the motor truck competition.

Competition.

About 30 per cent of the total revenue from the surcharges has been received on bituminous coal, and about 31.5 per cent of this portion was received by the three large carriers in the Pocahantas region. Competition by motor truck was less a factor in the I. C. C. order to reduce the coal surcharge than was the competition of fuel oil, natural gas and hydroelectric power for the business of the bituminous coal industry.

Suspect Admits Threat to Kill Son of U. S. Aid

Maryland Youth Arrested for Sending Extortion Letter to Farrands.

A 22-year-old Marylander who, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, threatened death to the 14-month-old son of a Department of Justice legal aid, has been arrested and has confessed, J. Edgar Hoover announced yesterday.

The prisoner, held in Baltimore, is Jesse J. Miller, of Thurmont, Md. He was arrested while sleeping in a Thurmont cemetery Saturday, four days after Mrs. Stephen McKevett Farrand received a letter threatening death to her baby son, Peter, unless $5,000 was paid.

Farrand is a lawyer in the office of Solicitor General Stanley Reed. He came here with his family from Los Angeles last March to take the position. The Farrands recently took a house at 3011 Gates road northwest, having previously made their residence at the Hotel Mayflower.

On June 9 Mrs. Farrand received the extortion letter. It was signed "R. B. G. Killer." The money was to be sent to Orville Miller, Blue Mountain, Md., within one week's time, otherwise Peter would be killed.

The note had been mailed at 7:30 a. m. the same day at Blue Ridge Summit, Pa.

Inside half an hour the written threat was in the hands of the Bureau of Investigation. Soon handwriting experts were subjecting it to scientific examination.

"The laboratory examination of the extortion letter," Hoover said yesterday, "indicated conclusively that Orville Miller had not prepared the letter and collateral investigation supported the fact that Orville Miller was not implicated in the sending of the letter.

Brother Arrested.

"Additional inquiries and the laboratory examination of the extortion note resulted in the arrest of Jesse J. Miller, age 22 years, of Thurmont, Md., the younger brother of Orville Miller. Jesse Miller has admitted the writing of the extortion letter."

From other sources, it was learned that Orville was arrested Thursday by a Federal agent while at work on a WPA recreational project at Catoctin Furnace, Md. His brother was taken into custody in the Thurmont cemetery on Saturday by Deputy Sheriff Edgar M. Freeze, of Frederick County, acting at the request of special agents.

The charge placed against Jesse Miller to hold him pending investigation of the more serious offense was trespassing on private property.

Will Be Prosecuted.

Hoover asserted the evidence will be presented to the office of Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney for the District, for prosecution. Later a fugitive complaint will be filed against Miller in Batlimore to expedite his removal here.

His police record, according to F. B. I. files, notes a 30-day sentence in Hagerstown, Md., for carrying concealed weapons, five days in Millgrove, N. Y., on a State charge and a six-month term in the Jessups and a six-month term in the Maryland House of Correction for larceny.

Special agents stood guard at the Farrand home on Gates road from the time receipt of the note was reported until the case was solved, it was revealed yesterday.

Nevertheless, Farrand immediately began a search for a good watchdog, and he is still looking for one, he confided. He believes the idea for the extortion attempt originated in the recent publication of a photograph of Mrs. Farrand and their son in a newspaper. Farrand is a graduate of Stanford University.

Five Are Arrested In Insurance Fraud

Los Angeles, June 15 (AP).—With five persons under arrest, an intensive search was organized for two others tonight in what District Attorney Buron Fitts called a Nation-wide self-mutilation racket through which insurance companies have been duped of $1,000,000 a year in false accident claims.

Five Long Beach residents were arrested in connection with a local insurance case and Fitts asked Minneapolis police to arrest Nathan Kasatsky and his wife, Eva.

He quoted Abe Donner as telling him Kasatsky, alias Jack Bray, purchased an accident policy for him and obtained a $1,000 settlement for a false automobile accident.

Charles E. Griffin, investigator for the district attorney, said that by means of the wireless and through an under-cover informant he learned the defendants conspired to collect insurance money from automobile accidents which never occurred.

Those under arrest are Harold Jenkins, 45; his wife, Alta, 42, and Elton Miner, 45, charged with suspicion of grand theft, and William Bone, 39, and Martin Biggs, 40, held on suspicion of grand theft and mayhem.

7 Hurt in Belgium As Strikers Riot

Brussels, June 15 (AP).—Police fought with 300 strikers who were attempting to close a large store in the fortified city of Liege tonight, bringing the first casualties of the Belgian strike movement.

Seven persons were injured.

Three policemen were wounded by bullets in Liege's historic suburb of Rocourt while protecting railroad strikebreakers from the strikers. There were minor incidents in Antwerp.

Liege, bulwark of Belgium's defense system on the German frontier, was without lights.

Electric workers in the city, scene of a gallant World War defense, joined the walkout of an estimated 150,000 miners, dock workers, and employes of other crafts.

As in France, the workers want shorter hours, paid vacations and similar advantages.

The movement also spread to Angleur, Ougree and Flemalle, involving stone, tire and metal industries.

Brazil Set to Balk Japanese Colony

Rio de Janeiro, June 15 (AP).—It appeared certain today that the Brazilian senate would move to nullify a land grant whereby the state of Amazonas gave 2,410,000 acres for Japanese colonization. The area is larger than Delaware.

Some quarters said the move, if made, would induce complications affecting a previous Japanese concession of 2,545,130 acres from state authorities in Para.

Questions raised involved the old issue of populating the Amazon River basin, whose 2,772,000 square miles make it the most extensive river basin in the world.

Members of the senate committee on judicial and constitutional matters said the Amazonas grant, though approved in 1930 by the state legislature, violated the federal constitution of 1934, which forbids concessions of more than 24,741 acres without consent of the senate and prohibits concentration of immigrants anywhere in Brazil.

The concession called for settlement of 10,000 Japanase families by 1980. Authoritative estimates placed Japanese now there at little more than 300. Less than 1,500 were said to be settled in the Para concession, decreed by the government of that state in 1928.

Ball Game to Feature Annual Masonic Day

A baseball game between the Shrine and Grotto will feature of the annual Masonic field day next Saturday at Griffith Stadium. The celebration, which is for the benefit of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, will be presented by the Masters Association and the Matrons and Patrons Association in 1936.

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired, will be the mashal. Robert B. Doing and Mrs. Myrtle L. Davis are in charge of the affair. Besides the ball game, there will be an hour of entertainment.

JESSIE J. MILLER, of Thurmont, Md., who has confessed, police say, to writing an extortion note to Mrs. Farrand.

Post Carrier Boy Wins St. John's Scholarship

Jerome W. Tarleton, 13-year-old Washington Post carrier boy, was announced as the winner of a four-year scholarship to St. John's College High School after a competitive examination with 300 other boys.

The boy, son of Policeman Jerome Tarleton, of the Traffic Division, was graduated from St. Peter's School last week. He took an examination and won a part scholarship to Gonzaga High School and last Saturday placed first in the competition for the tuition scholarship at St. John's.

Jerome has been delivering The Post in his neighborhood for nearly two years and is an accomplished guitar player.

Broker Found Shot to Death; His Wife Held

Her Story of Suicide Is Being Investigated by Police.

Chicago, June 15.—Joseph W. Bolton, jr., 39-year-old insurance broker, was shot three times and fatally wounded today in his Loop office. Mrs. Mary Bolton, 35, his estranged wife, was taken into custody for questioning.

The police said Mrs. Bolton told them her husband had committed suicide.

Police Sergt. Walter Fleming, however, said one bullet had entered Bolton's back, another had passed from his right side through the body, grazing the heart, and a third had struck his left arm.

Bolton was found slumped on the floor outside his office. Bullets in a chair and a window led the police to believe the shooting occurred in the office. His blood-stained straw hat also was in the office.

Arthur L. Ladd, a friend of Bolton, told police the couple might have been quarreling about the bonus. He said Mrs. Bolton had her husband's Army discharge papers, and that he could not apply for a bonus until she turned them over to him.

"He shot himself," the police said they were told by the wife. "We were struggling for the gun. I tried to get it away from him but couldn't."

Bolton died in a physician's office without regaining consciousness.

In Bolton's office police found a package from which the weapon, a .32-caliber revolver, apparently had been removed.

Bolton's firm, the Bolton-Shultz Insurance Co., is general agent in Chicago for several companies, including the Union Insurance Co. and Lloyds of Londan.

On February 24 Bolton obtained an injunction to prevent Mrs. Bolton from molesting him. He charged that on a previous occasion she had attempted to stab him.

Bolton filed suit for a divorce last January, charging cruelty.

House Unit Approves Bill to Cut AAA Benefits

By the Associated Press.

The House Agriculture Committee yesterday approved the Senate-approved bill to reduce big AAA benefit payments, but decided to amend it so as not to apply retroactively to the 1936 crop.

Under the measure, favored by Secretary Wallace, payments of from $2,000 to $10,000 for co-operating in the soil-conservation-AAA program would be cut 25 per cent, and those above $10,000 would be reduced 50 per cent.

'Conscience Fund' Swollen by $2,900

Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, jr., yesterday received at his home, an envelope containing $2,900. There were two $1,000 bills, one $500 bill and four $100 bills in a small inner envelope marked "Secretary of the Treasury."

There were no identifying marks on the envelopes. The postmark, rather blurred, said "Mount Airy and Wilm—" evidently Wilmington.

The Secretary, after giving newsmen who never even had seen a $1,000 bill a treat by letting them hold the money, carefully counted it again and added it to the store in the Treasury which is labeled "the conscience fund."

This fund now totals, $528,043.26, received since 1811, he said.

Wife Sues Suspect In Italian Killing

Santo Pennestri, 55, 732 Fifth street northwest, arrested here last week in connection with a murder committed in Italy 27 years ago, will have to appear in Juvenile Court today to face a non-support charge brought by his wife.

Mrs. Mary Pennestri swore to the warrant in which she charges Pennestri failed to support her and her four children, Dominic, 14, Samuel, 13, Virginia, 12, and Matilda, 9. Mrs. Pennestri said her husband has done nothing for her since his arrest.

Pennestri was arrested near his home by Inspector Bernard W. Thompson for the murder in his native land after an anonymous letter was received by District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett informing him that Pennestri is alleged to have killed a man in Italy in 1909.

Police have communicated with Roman authorities in regards to extradition proceedings, but have received no word in return.

Sulu Sultan's Brother Reported New Leader

Manila (Tuesday), June 16 (AP).—Threats of warfare over the election of a new Sultan of Sulu faded today on the basis of government advices that Raja Muda, brother of the late Sultan Jamalu'l Kiram, had been named to the throne. Despite the government reports, some sources said the election had not yet been held.

Muda had said he would lead his followers to battle if his claims to spiritual leadership were overlooked in the election.

Sweden's New Premier To Form Government

Stockholm, June 15 (AP).—Axel Pehrsson, Agrarian Party leader, was given the task of forming a new government tonight by King Gustav following upon the resignation of Premier Per-Albin Hansson's government.

The Socialist government of Premier Hansson resigned after the rejection last week by the Riksdag (Parliament) of a government bill to increase old-age pensions in the face of increased cost of living.

King Gustav asked the farmers' leader to form his cabinet on as broad a parliamentary basis as passible.
